VETERANS, HOME, TELL OF BRAVE AMERICAN DEEDS

1,977 Wounded and Convalescent Arrive on the Sierra and the Comfort.

CHAPLAIN ROUTED GERMANS

Used Machine Gun Until It Clogged, Then Tried Automatics and Rifles.

ALL PAY TRIBUTE TO 69TH

"Father Duffy Is the Most Popular Man in Europe," Says One—Cripples Dance in Port.

After being buffeted by strong westerly gales for many days the American transport Sierra and the United States hospital ship Comfort arrived in port yesterday, both two days late. They had 1,977 wounded and convalescent officers and men on board from the base hospitals in France. The police boat Patrol, with Grover A. Whelan, the Mayor's Secretary on board, went to Quarantine to meet the returning troops and saluted them with a blast from the new and powerful syren with which the boat was equipped yesterday.

The Sierra, which was made fast at Pier 4, Hoboken, had thirty-five officers and 1,531 men from Brest, practically all wounded at the western front. The majority of them were able to line the rail as the transport was being warped in, and the band on the pier played "Home, Sweet Home." Directly the gangway was down the Red Cross and Knights of Columbus workers went on board with baskets filled with cigarettes and packets of tobacco, which were eagerly accepted by the men.

Many of the soldiers who showed evidences of their baptism of fire told of incidents during the fighting round Château-Thierry and in the St. Mihiel section. Sergeant John Burke of the 165th Regiment said:

"We went into action on Washington's Birthday near Luneville, and our company lost more than twenty killed and many wounded. I was gassed in that engagement. After that we went to another sector in Lorraine, and were two days without a single casualty in our company. That was because the American artillery put over what the Huns called the million-dollar barrage, which lasted for fifty-one hours.

"Then we were rushed into Champagne on July 14, and fought there four days. As soon as the Huns there were well licked we hiked on to Château-Thierry with our replacements. We fought for two days after relieving the marines, who had borne the brunt of the German attack up to that time."

69th Saved the Day.

Private Vivian Commons of Company C of the 15th Infantry, whose home is at 2,030 University Avenue, the Bronx, was wounded in the right arm at Château-Thierry, but said that the sensation of being hit by a bullet when in the thick of the fighting was as nothing compared with being blown out of bed by a bomb dropped on the hospital in the middle of the night. "Our hospital was covered with flags," he added, "and the Hun aviators knew what building it was well enough, but that did not stop them from trying to knock it to pieces."

Private Ray Davis of the 149th Field Artillery of Illinois was enthusiastic when he spoke of the heroic deads performed by the old 69th New York Regiment, now the 165th Infantry.

"They saved the day all right at the battle of Champagne," he said. "They arrived on the scene just as the Alpins Chasseurs, the flower of the French Army, were being forced to retreat. We were told that the French officers suggested that it would be better to give way because the enemy was much superior in strength, but the officers of the 165th Regiment scouted the idea of retreating and went on. They had the support of the 149th Artillery and drove the Germans back in quick order. You can't boost the old 69th Regiment too much in New York. They are made of the right kind of stuff and every one of them is true blue."

One of the most popular officers on the transport was the Rev. Ray F. Jenney, the fighting chaplain of Decatur, Ill., who had four wound stripes on his sleeve. When all the officers of his company had been shot down in the big drive at St. Mihiel, he led the men on and brought back a trophy in the shape of a silver-mounted lugar gun that he took from a German commander when his company smashed up a machine gun.

The only colored member of the old 15th Regiment of New York to arrive on the Sierra was Major Napoleon Bonaparte Marshall, a lawyer of this city, who has been wounded several times and wore a steel jacket round his body. He had several wound stripes on his sleeve. Major Marshall was a graduate of Harvard in 1897, and won the quarter-mile running event that year.

"The secret of American success was that we kept on plugging without letup," said Lieutenant Stephen A. Sadol of Passaic, N. J., who was wounded in six

Hears Polish-Americans Will Occupy Danzig

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—Polish-American divisions, according to a well-informed source, says the Warsaw correspondent of the Weser-Zeitung, have embarked at Havre for Danzig, in West Prussia, with the intention of occupying the provinces of Posen and Silesia.

The headquarters of the Polish-American troops, according to this information, will be in the town of Posen.

SAYS BRITISH WANT CHECK ON BURLESON

Commercial Cable Secretary Tells of Request to Pass on Changes.

SECOND SUIT IS BEGUN

Postmaster General, It Maintains, Has Disturbed Treaties Without Senate's Consent.

William J. Deegan, Secretary of the Mackay Companies, operators of the Commercial Cable Company, speaking as a representative of Clarence H. Mackay, President of the Commercial Company, announced yesterday that a department of the British Government had requested the cable company not to put in effect any recommendations of Postmaster General Burleson until the British department had approved the recommendations. It could not be ascertained last night whether a similar request had been made to the Western Union's cable department. At the Western Union offices A. McKissick, assistant to Newcombe Carlton, President, declared that Mr. Carlton was out of the city, and that in his absence no one could discuss the matter.

The disclosure that the British Government was taking more than a passive interest in the attempt of the Postmaster General to combine and control the transatlantic cable system preceded by a scant half hour the institution of a second suit in equity against Mr. Burleson. The new bill of complaint was filed in the United States Court for this district by Charles Evans Hughes and William W. Cook, as counsel for the commercial interests operating under the title of the Commercial-Pacific Cable Company. The second suit concerns the seizure of the company's Pacific properties, a 10,010-mile cable stretching from San Francisco to China, Japan and the Philippine Islands.

The complaint in the second suit is worded virtually the same as the first bill, filed on Dec. 4, to prevent consummation of the seizure of the transatlantic cables, but at one point it raises the contention that seizure of cables terminating on foreign soil "constitutes the substance of a treaty." Developing this contention, the bill of complaint points out that matters pertaining to treaties cannot, except in violation of the Constitution of the United States, be carried through without the advice and consent of the Senate. The complaint declares that the seizure of the cables was accomplished without the Senate being consulted.

The entrance of the British Government into the cable controversy came out while Mr. Deegan was being questioned regarding an Ottawa dispatch, printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, which revealed Canada as investigating the cable seizure. The dispatch reported the Canadian Government as not being consulted about the seizure of the lines ending on her soil, and as being concerned because so much Dominion money was invested in the Commercial Company. Mr. Deegan was asked the extent of Canada's interest in the company.

Bonds Held in Canada.

"The Canadian Government has no financial interest" he replied, "but the bonds of the Commercial Cable Company and the shares of the Mackay Company, the holding corporation, are very considerably held throughout Canada." Because of an inference that the Dominion Government might, as a matter of self-protection, find it desirable to seize the cables of both the Commercial and Western Union at their landing point, thereby practically cutting the United States from all direct cable communication, Mr. Deegan was asked if the company had any hint of such action.

"No, I have heard nothing about that," he said, "and I think it very unlikely because of the extremely warm friendship and understanding between Canada and the United States." Mr. Deegan then issued this statement for Mr. Mackay:

A dispatch from Ottawa in this morning's paper says that the Canadian Government was not consulted by Postmaster General Burleson in his seizure of the cables between Canada and Great Britain. At the offices of the Commercial Cable Company it was stated today that a feeling was also asserting itself in Great Britain and that one department of the British Government had instructed the Commercial Cable Company to make no changes at the direction of Postmaster General Burleson without first submitting them to that department for approval. The idea of the American Postmaster General presuming to assert authority or control over cables running between Canada and Great Britain is an assumption of power that is apparently not only resented

HEARST LETTERS TODAY IN INQUIRY INTO PROPAGANDA

Senate Investigators Decide to Admit the Publisher's Correspondence.

FUEHR DIARY IN EVIDENCE

GERMANS SPENT $7,500,000

Bielaski Brings Names of Bernard H. Ridder and Hannis Taylor Before the Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—A batch of letters, telegrams and editorials, said to have been written or inspired by William Randolph Hearst, was offered in evidence before the Senate Committee which is investigating the German propaganda late this afternoon.

A. Bruce Bielaski, Chief of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation, started to read as the first of the documents a letter of instruction from Mr. Hearst in which he ordered the editors of his papers to begin a vigorous campaign against the enactment of the espionage law. Before the witness had read more than a few words, Senator King of Utah, a member of the committee, objected to his proceeding until the committee should have an opportunity to pass on the admissibility of the documents. The result was an executive session which resulted in a decision to read all of the documents into the record at tomorrow afternoon's session.

Senator Nelson of Minnesota was in favor of having the documents made matters of record this afternoon and there was a lively little tilt between him and Senator King.

Nelson in Tiff with King.

"We want everything in this record that bears on the matter under investigation," said the Minnesotan, "and we want all the names of those who were against us as well as of those who were for us."

"But we don't wish to make a sewer of the record," retorted the Senator from Utah.

Senator Overman of North Carolina, Chairman of the committee, who shares the views of Senator Nelson on the point, settled the whole affair by suggesting that it be threshed out in executive session.

The reading of the documents was suggested by Major Humes of the army, who referred to them as the "so-called Palm Beach letters."

While all of the documents said to bear the signature of Mr. Hearst were barred from the record today, his name kept cropping out all through the morning and afternoon sessions. An excerpt from the diary of Dr. Karl A. Fuehr, who was head of the literary branch of the propaganda machine during the presence in this country of Dr. Dernburg, referred to the attitude of the Hearst papers as one that had been "friendly from the beginning," and this entry in his records Dr. Fuehr wrote a few weeks before passports were handed to Bernstorff by Secretary Lansing.

In another entry in his diary, Dr. Fuehr named the only big newspapers in the country which, in his opinion, were worthy to be classed as neutral. These, he wrote, were the Hearst papers in all parts of the country, The Washington Post, The New York Evening Mail, The Milwaukee Free Press, and The Chicago Tribune.

Cites Bennett Articles.

Mr. Bielaski remarked after reading the names of these papers that Fuehr had probably put The Chicago Tribune in the list because of articles written by James O'Donnell Bennett, who went into Germany as a correspondent for that paper. Mr. Bielaski described Mr. Bennett as violently pro-German.

Bernard H. Ridder of The New Yorker Staats-Zeitung was also named today when Mr. Bielaski read a letter which he said had been written to Captain Franz von Papen, the former German Military Attaché. In this letter, written in June, 1915, Mr. Ridder referred to a person that "I sent out West" who was able, he said, to enlist several rich citizens of Chicago in the "propaganda which we have started." Mr. Ridder also referred to a fund of $13,000 which, he said, had been subscribed for agitation among the laboring classes.

Hannis Taylor, who was Minister to Spain in the second Cleveland Administration, likewise got into the record when Mr. Bielaski stated that the Government had evidence to show that Mr. Taylor was retained by officials of the defunct Labor's National Council for Peace to write legal opinions against the export of munitions to the Allies, which Mr. Taylor contended, the witness said, was in violation of the Constitution. The Peace Council, by which Mr. Taylor was retained, Mr. Bielaski added, was financed by the German Government, the money being advanced by Rintelen, the intimate friend of the former Crown

Renewal of the Armistice to be Taken Up at Once

BERLIN, Dec. 9, (via Amsterdam.)—Mathias Erzberger, head of the German armistice delegation, announced today that the French Government had requested the German army command to designate plenipotentiaries to confer regarding the prolongation of the armistice.

The delegates will meet at Treves Dec. 12 and 13.

The revised armistice terms, as given out in Washington, stated the duration of the armistice was thirty days with the option of renewal. As it was signed on Nov. 11, it would normally expire tomorrow.

The version of the armistice as published in France and England, said the duration was thirty-six days, which would bring it to an end on Tuesday next.

GIVES $10,000,000 TO MEDICAL WORK

De Lamar Divides Half of $20,000,000 Estate Among Columbia and 2 Other Institutions.

MANY SMALLER BEQUESTS

Daughter Gets $10,000,000 in Trust, to Revert to Institutions if She Dies Childless.

The will of Captain Joseph Raphael De Lamar, capitalist, mine owner and director in many large enterprises, leaves nearly half his estate, estimated at $20,000,000, to the Harvard University Medical School, Johns Hopkins University, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University for medical research into the cause of disease and into the principles of correct living. The bequests to these institutions in equal shares consists of his residuary estate, estimated at about $10,000,000. He gave a trust fund of $10,000,000 to his only child, Alice Antoinette De Lamar, with the provision that if she dies without issue the principal of this fund also goes to the institutions named.

The clause setting aside the residuary estate requests that the fund be used as follows:

"For the study and teaching of the origin of human disease and the prevention thereof; for the study and teaching of dietetics and of the effect of different food and diets on the human system, and how to conserve health by proper food and diet, and in connection with the foregoing purposes to establish and maintain fellowships, instructorships, scholarships, and professorships; to construct, maintain, and equip laboratories, clinics, dispensaries, and other places for such study and research and to provide proper housing of same; to publish and disseminate the results of such study and research, not only in scientific journals and for physicians and scientists, but also, and this I especially enjoin on the legatees, by popular publications, public lectures and other appropriate methods to give to the people of the United States generally the knowledge concerning the prevention of sickness and disease, and also concerning the conservation of health by proper food and diet."

The will suggests that the legatees use any means they deem expedient for the purposes named, and requests that the fund be kept intact.

Captain De Lamar gave to his daughter his country place, Pembroke, at Glen Cove, L. I., and provides that the income from her $10,000,000 trust fund is to be free from any control of her husband or any other person.

The will also gives $1,000,000 to the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, and $50,000 to the Netherlands Meetray, a public institution in the Province of Gelderland, Holland. He leaves $50,000 to be divided among the employes of his New York and Glen Cove houses, and an equal amount to his secretary, Alfred H. Curtiss. The children of two deceased sisters, Masina Kroon and Teresa Vanderburg, of Cape Colony, a third of two deceased brothers, Paul, in Rotterdam, and Charles, in Amsterdam, got $50,000 for each family, and an equal sum went to Abraham De Lamar, a living brother in Amsterdam.

Captain De Lamar gave $25,000 to the wife of Major E. W. Dayton, U. S. A., because she has been the companion of his daughter, and $25,000 to Mrs. Lillian M. Hillhouse, formerly Mrs. Adelbert G. Volck, wife of the son of Mme. Da Gama, whose husband has been the Brazilian Ambassador to this country for some years. Mrs. Hillhouse and Mrs. Dayton are sisters and have been described as nieces of Captain De Lamar.

The will also contains this unusual clause:

"I declare that I have never been married to any one except my late wife, the mother of my said daughter, and that I have never had a child born to me except my said daughter, Alice Antoinette De Lamar."

Captain De Lamar requested that his stock in the International Nickel Company, of which he was Vice President, be held by his executors, William Nelson Cromwell, Alfred Jaretzki, and the United States Trust Company, for the benefit of his estate.

FAVORS OPEN DISCUSSIONS

President Wants Press Enabled to Give Peace Proceedings Fully.

LIKE AMERICAN SENATE

Confidential and Delicate Matters Could Be Looked After by Committees.

FRANCE PREPARES WELCOME

Reported That President While in Rome Will Visit the Vatican.

ON BOARD U. S. S. GEORGE WASHINGTON, Dec. 9, (by Wireless to The Associated Press.)—President Wilson probably will not sit at the peace table, but will be represented there by delegates, while remaining in close contact with the heads of the other nations and prepared to decide questions referred to him.

Premier Clemenceau, it is believed, will be President of the Peace Conference. This is considered fitting, because the conference will be held in France.

President Wilson's disposition is in favor of entirely public proceedings, such as are carried on in the Senate Chamber at Washington, with every facility given to the press representatives to report certain business. Naturally, there will be need of secrecy, as there is in the Foreign Relations Committee, but the President's idea is that the procedure could be much the same as at Washington, a committee considering the confidential and delicate features of various questions and then reporting back to the peace congress for action.

President Wilson late yesterday unexpectedly attended a songfest in the enlisted men's hall where, afterward, he shook hands with the officers and sailors. Three cheers and a "tiger" were given for the President.

The weather is warm and the sea calm.

The Naval Escort to Brest.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9. — Admiral Sims, Commander in Chief of all American naval forces in Europe, will personally command the fleet of nine battleships and thirty destroyers which is to meet President Wilson's ship at sea and escort it to Brest. Secretary Daniels announced today that Admiral Sims's flagship would be the Wyoming.

Upon the joining of these ships with the Pennsylvania and the accompanying destroyers, the entire naval escort to Brest and all ships accompanying the President will be under the command of Admiral Mayo, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, whose flag flies from the Pennsylvania.

MAY TAKE UP LEAGUE EARLY

Forecast of Paris Paper—Elaborate Plans to Receive Wilson.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—During the preliminary conversations to fix the program for the Peace Conference it is probable that the allied delegates will decide if the organization of a society of nations will be elaborated at the Peace Congress or left to a further conference, the Petit Journal says.

Jules Pams, Minister of the Interior, and high officials of the French Police Department at a conference with American military authorities Sunday agreed upon all arrangements incident to the arrival of President Wilson in Paris.

It has been decided that President Wilson, on his arrival at the Bois de Boulogne station at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, will be met by President Poincaré and other members of the Government. He will go immediately to the Murat house, which will be his home while he is in Paris.

The League of the Rights of Man has decided to send a deputation to Brest to meet President Wilson on his arrival in France. The Paris members of the league will meet the President on his arrival in Paris and present an address of welcome. All sections of the league throughout France have been asked to organize meetings in order to inform the public of the principles for a democratic peace which the President has outlined.

BREST, Dec. 9.—Brest is preparing to outdo itself in the reception of President Wilson when he lands, its Mayor indicates in a proclamation to the people.

"The importance of an event unique in the history of the world will escape none of us," the proclamation says. "Breaking with the tradition of isolation, the New World sends to the Old Continent, the cradle of its ancestors, the eminent man who is the incarnation of the ideal of Free America. A universal union of peoples is in preparation, after the downfall of the powers of carnage and oppression.

"The population of Brest will be eager to celebrate in a notable way the arrival

Report Counter-Revolution Started at Potsdam; Troops Summoned to Protect Berlin from Mobs

COPENHAGEN, Tuesday, Dec. 10.—A counter-revolutionary movement is in full swing at Potsdam, according to a Berlin dispatch to the National Tidende.

Previous reports from Berlin, filed at 2 o'clock Monday morning, stated that the demonstrations there Sunday were without untoward incident.

Speaking at a meeting on Sunday, Herr Heine of the Potsdam Soldiers' and Workmen's Council said that a general command had been secretly established in Berlin, which did not acknowledge the soldiers' and workers' division. Cavalry and sharpshooters were under orders of this command, he asserted, and two-thirds of these troops were stationed between Potsdam and Nikolassee.

The Soldiers' and Workers' Council at Hamburg has announced the discovery of a plot for a counter-revolutionary coup there on Monday night. It was planned to arrest the members of the Soldiers' and Workers' Council, repress the workers by armed force, and re-establish the former authorities. Several conspirators, including prominent newspaper men and Herr Plumm, former member of the Reichstag, have been arrested.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Additional troops were brought to Berlin on Sunday by the Ebert Government to crush the Spartacus movement, which is in control of the northern suburbs of the German capital, a Zurich dispatch to L'Information of Paris says. The Radicals are said to hold the building in which the Prussian Chamber of Deputies meets.

BASLE, Dec. 9.—Rumors were current in Berlin, according to a dispatch from that city, that the Spartacus group of Socialists would tonight name Dr. Liebknecht as President of the republic.

LLOYD GEORGE FOR A WORLD LEAGUE

CHURCHILL FOR SEA POWER

Says a League of Nations Cannot Be a Substitute for the British Navy.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Premier Lloyd George, at a great meting in Albert Hall today, made an appeal for the votes of the women.

The meeting was attended exclusively by women, it being unique in that and in other ways. The guard of honor was made up of members of the various uniformed women's organizations.

The Premier pointed out that between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 women would have a direct influence on the legislation of the future, which would largely depend on how they voted.

"If you suspect any man of going to the Peace Conference with war in his heart," said the Premier, "vote against him. The coming peace must make war difficult, if not impossible. Those who made the war must pay the penalty. The higher they are the more reason why they should be punished. The German people must also be made to pay the penalty. If it is an easy peace it will not be a just peace."

The Premier said he was a believer in a League of Nations; because while he could not say it would prevent war, it would add to the difficulties of making war.

Huge armies, which tempted rulers to war, must not be allowed to continue.

He declared himself in favor of equal rights for women, as well as "equal pay for equal work and equality in the marriage laws."

Churchill Insists on Naval Power.

LONDON, Dec. 9, (via Montreal.)—Winston Churchill, in an article contributed to The Glasgow Sunday Post, says that Great Britain will use all her influence to make the League of Nations a powerful reality, but she cannot regard it as a substitute for her own navy in any measurable period of time.

In his article, which treats of British naval supremacy in amplification of his recent address on the subject, Mr. Churchill speaks of Great Britain's unique position among the nations of the world.

"Our safety from invasion, our daily bread, every means whereby we maintain our existence as an independent people; our unity as an empire or federation of commonwealths and dependencies—all these float from hour to hour upon our naval defense," Mr. Churchill writes.

"If that defense is neglected, weakened, or fettered," he continues, "we all shall be in continual danger of subjugation or starvation. We should be forced to live in continued anxiety. If that naval defense were overpowered or outmatched by any other navy, or probably by a combination of navies, we should hold, not merely our possessions, but our lives and liberties, only on sufferance.

"Where else in the whole world can such conditions be paralleled? We have the right to demand from all other nations, friends and foes alike, full recognition of those facts. We are also entitled to point out that this naval strength that we require and which we are determined to preserve has never AMERONGEN, Dec. 6.—Within the moated Castle of Amerongen William Hohenzollern is more isolated from the world than ever. Not since Saturday last has the dethroned monarch been outside the grounds, and then it was only for a short ride in a closed motor, and only once since then has he even walked in the garden, and that day it was with his consort at his side and policemen very near by.

Day by day, most of the day he is in his study, where he will sit alone writing, writing, always writing. Sheet after sheet of foolscap has the ex-Emperor covered with, they say, his replies to the world's dreadful arraignment against him. His private correspondence outward, too, is heavy apparently, but out of all proportion to the number of letters which reach him.

So much we know, but there is still mystery enough about the Castle of Amerongen and its royal refugees. Strange whispers get abroad. There are those who dare hint that Amerongen will soon be free of its unwelcome guest, that at any moment he may disappear as unexpectedly as he came. Others speak of a complete physical breakdown and of the arrival from Germany of the ex-Kaiser's personal physician, of the ex-Majesty's early removal to a nursing home for nerve patients. They act and gossip, but there seems no change inside daily.

No feudal fastness was more faithfully guarded than Count Bentinck's castle. Half a dozen policemen stand always in the entrance. Others patrol the approaches and exits. On three sides of the Lordship of Amerongen there is a high wall, but the fourth is bordered beyond the moat by an open, public roadway, built on a dike. From this may be had a view of the garden and castle.

When I was there yesterday a thin rain was falling. No figure was to be seen under the dripping trees, and in the house there was no sign of life. Over many of the windows blinds were drawn. About it all was a sombre air of mystery. The castle looked deserted, though you knew that somewhere in its depths was that fallen monarch, always filling his vain reams of foolscap with vain writings.

Reports of Illness Denied.

My informants deny that Wilhelm's physical condition is other than normal or that he has suffered in health since his flight from Germany, but at the same time there are indications that he is undergoing a severe mental strain by reason of the fact that he is marked as a man of blood who moves in deadly fear of his life and whose mind is filled with sombre apprehension.

Apart from his hosts, only one or two of the old Potsdam retainers are allowed to come into personal contact with the Hohenzollerns, and on the rare occasions when he ventures beyond the

INQUIRY ON BERLIN RIOTS

Mass of Demonstrations and Shootings Terrorized City.

THRILLING STREET SCENES

MYSTERIOUS ORDERS GIVEN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 7, (via Copenhagen.)—It is not quite clear yet whether last evening's riots, shooting affrays, and demonstrations in the streets of Berlin were nothing but an extraordinary series of coincidences or the result of sinister machinations against the Government. There is still a third explanation—namely, that in the main the violent acts were really nothing but a badly managed if well meant and partly spontaneous demonstration in favor of the Ebert-Haase Government.

First, Lieutenant Fischer appears in the Prussian Diet building, where the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council is in session, and declares the committee arrested in the name of the People's Commissioners.

Second, about the same time several columns of soldiers and sailors appear in front of the Chancellor's palace offering to Ebert the Presidency of the Republic of Germany.

Third, at a meeting of the unemployed in Berlin, arranged by the Council of Deserters, which is closely connected with the Spartacides, it is announced that the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council has been arrested and that the Government is trying to cheat the proletarians out of the fruits of the revolution with cries of "Let's hang Ebert; down with the counter-revolution!" the meeting forms in line, proceeding down the Chaussée-strasse, where it is received with machine-gun fire from the guards in the neighborood barracks. It is here that the casualties result.

Committee's Captor Arrested.

Fourth, meanwhile Lieutenant Fischer proceeds from the Prussian Diet building to the Chancellor's palace to report the arrest of the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, but if he is to hold them he desires a written warrant in place of the telephone message authorizing their arrest. The People's Commissioners state that they never authorized the arrest. Fischer himself is arrested.

Fifth, while Fischer's men are still holding the Prussian Diet building another column of soldiers, having heard of the trouble and wishing to aid the Government, arrives at the Diet building, led by a soldier named Franz. These men are told what has happened, and that Fischer's men are in charge, whereupon they march away.

Sixth, a column of under officers commanded by Leader Suppe takes up a position along the Wilhelmstrasse, shutting off the approach from Unter den Linden, for the protection of the Chancellor's palace.

Seventh, Franz and his soldiers, turned away from the Diet building, appear at the offices of Die Rote Fahne and keep observation for nearly four hours, until ordered to leave by the People's Commissioners.

Council Chiefs Astounded.

When Fischer and his fifty or a hundred men invaded the Diet building, Fischer and twenty men entered the meeting room, pointed revolvers at the twelve committee members of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, and said:

"Hands up! We arrest you in the name of the Government."

The committee members soon recovered from their surprise and desired to see the warrant. Fischer, who had none, insisted that he had received the authority by telephone. "Then let us consult the People's Commissioners by telephone," was suggested, but Fischer's men stood guard over the telephone.

"Form in two detachments, each taking six members of the Executive Committee to prison," commanded Fischer. But just then Herr Barth, one of the People's Commissioners, who happened to be in the building, stepped into the meeting room, and, hearing what had happened, told Fischer that the People's Commissioners could not possibly have ordered the arrests or he would have known about it.

Fischer seemed uncertain and his men began to waver. Finally, it was agreed that most of his men should remain in charge of the meeting room while Fischer himself, with half a dozen men, proceeded to the Chancellor's palace to report the arrest.

Asking Ebert to be President.

This happens soon after 5 o'clock. About the same time a long column of soldiers and sailors, headed by a drum corps, marched down the Wilhelmstrasse, lining up in front of the Chancellor's building. Soon other smaller detachments joined. They belonged to a dozen different formations, and, as they assured THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, who went among them, had no other intention than to demonstrate their loyalty to the Ebert-Haase Government and their desire for an early national convention. Spiro, their leader, made a speech giving expression to these wishes. His most significant words, however, were drowned in the noise, but a newspaper report, evidently furnished by himself, quotes him as making the following significant remark:

"The Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council must no longer be permitted to put its clumsy hand to the wheel of the Government or exert any pressure upon it. The Executive Committee's evil influence should be stopped at once. We are sure that we are acting in the name of the whole nation, and especially in the name of our brother soldiers, if we now proclaim Fritz Ebert President of the German Republic."

Deafening applause and the roll of many drums greeted the appearance of Ebert, who made the short speech already reported. He ignored Spiro's offer, defended the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, and stated that the National Convention would have the decisive word on everything.

Two other speakers who followed, a young civilian and a sailor from Kiel, gave expression to antagonism to the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council. It seemed almost as if they wished to force Ebert to declare himself against the council. Again Spiro addressed Ebert, saying:

"I must ask one more question of you, Herr Ebert. You have just been proclaimed President of the German Republic. Do you accept? Yes or no?"

Ebert replied:

"Comrades and friends, I am unwilling to accept your offer without first having consulted my colleagues in the Government. This is so serious a matter that it must be left to the Council of the Peoples' Commissioners."

The soldiers and sailors had hardly marched away when Fischer and his men arrived from the Diet Building. He asked to see Ebert, and a slip of paper on which to state his business was handed to him. He wrote:

"I wish to report that I have just placed the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council under arrest in their meeting room, as ordered by the People's Commissioners. They demand to see a written order for their arrest."

Fischer was at once admitted to the Council by the astonished People's Commissioners, who told him very plainly that he must be a fool to accept notice of such an important order by telephone. Haase suggested that probably the Captain of Köpenick had been at work again, but the other members could not see the joke, called the palace guard, placed Fischer and his companions under arrest, and dispatched a trusty person to the Diet's palace to release the Soldiers' and Workmen's Committee, and explain the situation.

Bullets Rained on Crowd.

Between 5 and 6 o'clock some 500 persons, mostly unemployed, gathered in Sophia Hall, in the northern district of Berlin, and listened to speeches made by members of the deserters' council, who are said to be in the pay of Liebknecht. Suddenly a door opened and a man called out:

"Comrades, they have arrested the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council. This is the beginning of the counter-revolution. Will you permit Scheidemann and his Junker friends to cheat you?"

The 500 men formed in line, proceeding on Oranienburgerstrasse toward Chausséestrasse. They shouted "Hurrah for Liebknecht!" and bore along great posters reading, "Down with Hindenburg! Down with the officers who hide in the Soldiers' Councils!"

Some women and children followed them. At the corner of Invalidenstrasse, some guard fusiliers, who have barracks close by, were in position with machine guns. They had been alarmed by a cry that the approaching column was composed of Spartacides who intended to invade the Chancellor's palace. When the procession neared Invalidenstrasse the guard fusiliers shouted:

"Go back, or we shoot!"

A man carrying a red flag said:

"Comrades, you are not going to shoot us. We intend to protect the fruits of the revolution."

But the soldiers would not hear.

"Back, or we fire!" they shouted again.

Then the crowd surged forward. "Fire!" came the command. The machine guns began to rattle and some isolated shots were fired from rifles.

A ghastly shriek from 600 mouths went up. Down went the man at the head, his red flag torn by machine-gun fire. Others dropped dead or wounded, and some stumbled and fell. In one minute all was over and the crowd was completely dispersed.

The guard fusiliers picked up the bodies of the dead and wounded, fifty-three in all, and carried them into neighboring houses, where they called physicians and ambulances. Sixteen are reported dead and fifteen seriously wounded, the rest slightly hurt.

Extremists' Organ Seized.

About 4 o'clock in the afternoon Captain Kessler appeared in the barracks of the so-called Franzer Regiment, assembled the Soldiers' Council there, and declared that he had been sent by the Government to explain how the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council had robbed the Fatherland right and left and how this committee had recently stolen two and a half millions in gold. It was intended, he said, to arrest the members that afternoon. The Franzer Regiment would be expected to march to the Diet's Palace, take part in the arrests, and afterward in an ovation to Ebert.

Comrade Franz, who is President of the Franzer Regiment's Soldiers' Council, undertook to take part in the arrests, but when his men reached the Diet's Palace they found it already in charge of Fischer's men, whereupon they marched to the Brandenburgher Gate. There they met the palace guard of sailors under Count Metternich. The Franzers joined the latter, and together they marched to the Chancellor's palace and joined in the ovation to Ebert.

As they were entering Leipzigerstrasse homeward bound they encountered an automobile, in which were seated two former members of their regiment, who persuaded Commandant Franz to lead his men to the offices of Die Rote Fahne and make a search for the stolen Government seals and money said to be in the possession of Liebknecht. They were admitted without difficulty, but they found no seals.

After holding the office of Die Rote Fahne for an hour and a half, a deputy of Commissioner Haase appeared and declared that the Government had not authorized the seizure. He told the crowd to clear out, which it did with alacrity.

An hour before Commander Suppe, in charge of 5,000 under officers, who only recently organized for the protection of the Ebert-Haase Government, was notified by telephone that crowds of soldiers and masses of people had assembled on Unter den Linden, on Wilhelmstrasse, and in the Diet Building, evidently intending to cause trouble for the Government. Suppe immediately summoned about 500 former under officers and proceeded down Unter den Linden. He took a position at the corner of Wilhelmstrasse and closed both streets to the public.

Then he sent a reconnoitring platoon toward the Chancellor's palace. The latter was met by the palace guard homeward bound. Not knowing whether the under officers were friendly or otherwise, Metternich's men prepared for action. So did the under officers. Bloodshed, however, was avoided by Metternich calling for three cheers for the People's Commissioners, in which the under officers joined.

Demand for an Investigation.

The afternoon papers all urge the Government to make a thorough investigation and spare none, whoever he may be, and whatever his intention. Die Freiheit calls on the people to revenge the outrage and make an end of Scheidemann, Ebert, and their "reactionary friends."

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent was informed this afternoon that the Government had already commenced an investigation. It is thought quite likely now that the person who gave Fischer the order for the arrest of the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, Captain Kessler, who ordered the Franzer regiment to take part in the arrest and the ovation to Ebert; the unknown man who announced to the Deserters' Council meeting in Sophia Hall that the arrest of the Executive Committee had taken place; the officers who incited the guard fusiliers to bloodshed in the Chausséestrasse, and the person who notified Suppe, commander of the under officers, all acted under the influence of some as yet unknown parties who sought to create trouble and confusion, under the cover of which perhaps more serious attacks were planned. Others, however, are still inclined to see the occurrences of last night as merely the irresponsible activity of well-meaning hotheads.

Liebknecht Pleads for Rising.

Dec. 8.—Yesterday afternoon news spread over Berlin that Liebknecht was about to march on the Chancellor's Palace with 2,000 men to seize it.

Toward 4 o'clock a large automobile with a machine gun aboard made its appearance in Unter den Linden, followed by several other cars filled with armed men in uniforms and civilian clothes. The first was occupied by Liebknecht and his bodyguard. The procession stopped at various places and by sounding its horn and with cries of "Hurrah for liberty! Down with Ebert and Scheidemann!" quickly collected large crowds, whom Liebknecht addressed in his most fanatical style.

He asked the people to go on a general strike, to build barricades and put down the counter-revolutionary movement by force of arms, to depose the present Government at once, and to make the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workers' Council the highest authority in Germany.

At each place where the procession stopped thousands of people gathered quickly. But so little enthusiasm was evinced for the Liebknecht ideas that he soon left Unter den Linden and turned northward, stopping, however, in front of the Kommandantur, where the Socialist Deputy Otto Wels is in charge, whom the Spartacides hate like poison. They pointed their machine guns at the building, but the numerous guards posted all around it and at the various street corners looked so threatening that Liebknecht thought it wise to proceed still further northward.

Still there seems to be a lot of trouble ahead. Deputy War Minister Göhre told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that the Government had received news that Spartacides employed in the suburban factories intended to march against Berlin this evening under Liebknecht's leadership. Göhre said the Government had decided to avoid all trouble and unless they attacked private or public property or used violence against the Government troops the procession would be left unmolested. On the other hand, they were fully prepared to suppress all rioting by force.

Military guards around all public buildings were greatly strengthened today and all precautions were taken against any surprise.

Sundry Crowd Seizes Armed Cars.

Dec. 9.—Some thirty political meetings of all parties, of which twenty-five alone were Socialistic, took place yesterday in Berlin and the suburbs, all of them passing comparatively quietly.

Karl, as Liebknecht is generally called by all the Spartacides, spoke at Trepton and several other places, racing from one place to another in an armored car accompanied by his bodyguard of twenty-five hardened warriors.

Notwithstanding his arduous day, Liebknecht appeared about 7 o'clock on Unter den Linden, accompanied by his usual following in automobiles armed with machine guns. Speaking from their vehicles, he and other orators soon gathered enormous crowds around them.

They then went through Wilhelmstrasse toward Leipsicerstrasse, being met on the way by other columns moving from Potsdamer Platz toward Unter den Linden. The crowds were shouting vociferously in passing the Chancellor's palace, which, however, was strongly guarded by machine guns.

At the corner of Vosstrasse were three large cars armed with heavy machine guns. The crowds went up hesitatingly, recognising them as belonging to the Government's police service. "Don't shoot, don't shoot!" they cried, and the men aboard shouted back that they would not shoot so long as the people behaved.

Then all of a sudden the crowds rushed forward, and before the soldiers knew what was happening they were swept from the armored cars and their places occupied by the tumultuous wave. The cars were then taken past the Chancellor's palace, winding their way through enormous masses that by this time nearly blocked Wilhelmstrasse.

In front of the Brandenburger gate Liebknecht again addressed the people, praising them for what they had done. It was a brave thing, he said, to rob the Government of means for shedding blood, meaning the seizure of the armored cars, and then he proceeded to tell the people how, as he alleged, several Guard regiments had been kept for some days all ready at Nicklassee, between Potsdam and Berlin, to sweep on the capital should the men in power find that they could no longer withstand the anger of the people. He said that Marten, Matuschka, and Rheinbaben were in the pay of the Government, and should be shot on sight "by any honest Spartacides."

After that the crowds dispersed, some soldiers apparently belonging to the Liebknecht group taking charge of the captured cars.

BERLIN MOB IN TERROR FROM MACHINE GUNS

ROTTERDAM, Dec. 8.—After the Spartacus group in its Berlin demonstration had demanded the immediate demobilization of the army and the formation of a Red Guard there suddenly appeared in the hall where the group meeting was taking place an army deserter, who cried out: "Comrades, at 5 o'clock the Executive Committee was arrested. Officers of the reaction have arrested our committee. Ebert has been proclaimed President. If you now leave the hall you will see an incredible sight. Soldiers armed with bayonets fixed are occupying the streets."

Upon these words there followed an indescribable tumult. Then some one from the audience rushed on to the platform and shouted: "Comrades, let us take revenge for the Executive Council! Let us storm the Chancellor's palace and hang Ebert on the nearest lamppost. Follow me!"

Meantime in the streets lines of soldiers with fixed bayonets had cut off the Invalidenstrasse in both directions and the Chausséestrasse. With red flags the crowd beyond the soldiers' barricade moved forward. The command to the soldiers was heard to "Close the ranks. Prepare!" And at the same time some soldiers shouted to the crowd to go back. The demonstrators refused, but retreated before the bayonets, and for a time bloodshed was avoided.

Just afterward, however, it was seen that huge crowds of rioters had worked round by the side streets, and they suddenly appeared upon the scene from this unexpected direction. The command was immediately given to clear the street. A fight began, but suddenly the leaders among the demonstrators raised cheers for Liebknecht, and the crowd again began to move forward.

The command to go back again was given, but disobeyed, and immediately machine-gun fire, supported by rifles, was opened into the crowd with fearful results. Scores of persons fell, and there were shrieks for help from all directions during the continuous machine-gun fire, which lasted two minutes.

In the awful panic which took place the civilians did not know what to do, and some soldiers went among them and held them down to the ground so as to be beneath the stream of bullets. About twenty persons, in their blind terror, rushed through the great plate-glass windows of a large store.

The inhabitants of houses immediately put out all their lights and took refuge in the back rooms.

After the firing ceased there were a couple of minutes of complete silence, and then the trembling people ventured out to pick up the dead and aid the wounded, who were scattered about all over the street.

Describing the arrest of the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workers' Council of Berlin, the correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant telegraphs:

"From various directions small groups of soldiers, belonging to different regiments, arrived before the House of Deputies, where the Executive Council sits. Some of their leaders went inside and said that they received telephonic order in their barracks to form a guard of the House of Deputies. A few minutes later, as if at a given signal, soldiers and a number of civilians closed up before the doors, and on the appearance of one of the members of the Executive Council to inquire what was the trouble he was greeted with cries of 'Down with the Executive Council!' and 'You are against the Government of Ebert and Scheidemann! You must go!'

"The member attempted to make a speech, arguing that the real motive of the soldiers was to get rid of the Government and overthrow the republic. But he was interrupted by a group of soldiers forcing their way into the house, where a noncommissioned officer announced that the members of the Executive Council were to be arrested on command of the Government.

"Herr Barth, a member of the Government, who was present, asserted that such a command could not possibly have been issued by the Government, and demanded that the soldiers should lay before him their written authority. The noncommissioned officer only repeated that he had received the orders by word of mouth.

"Thereupon the members declared that they refused to allow themselves to be arrested by a noncommissioned officer and his escort. The noncommissioned officer hesitated and eventually said that he would be satisfied by keeping them in the building under guard."

In an interesting analysis of the mixed motives behind all these equally mixed events the correspondent of the Courant says:

"The action of the soldiers of the Guard was against the Spartacus group and for the Government, but it must be borne in mind that Ebert was supported by the soldiers not chiefly because they approve of his program, but simply because they see in him a strong man who can save order and the Fatherland. The soldiers press instinctively toward a dictator who, with a strong hand, can clear the confused situation, and because they obviously do not wish a militaristic and counter-revolutionary dictator. They wish to proclaim Ebert, whom they regard as an able man, as President, and to free him against his own will from the influence of the Executive Committee."

SOLDIERS SELL IN STREETS.

ROTTERDAM, Dec. 8.—The street scenes in Berlin are extraordinary. There are lively crowds everywhere, but the most striking feature is the number of discharged soldiers trying to gain a living as street vendors, recalling ominously what happened in Petrograd after the revolution.

The following picture is drawn by the Berlin correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant:

"The streets of Berlin exhibit now the same joyful crowds of former years in the period when Christmas approaches, and especially noticeable are many couples oblivious to all ills in the happiness of reunion. One notices no apprehension of revolutionary troubles in the demeanor of the public filling the streets but a clear indication of the new situation is the hitherto unknown sight in Berlin of a large number of soldiers mingling with the crowd and offering for sale all kinds of trifles.

"They are selling in the streets cigarettes, pamphlets, newspapers, red badges, and revolutionary postcards, among them more or less successful caricatures of the Kaiser. In this respect Berlin also is beginning to bear resemblance to Petrograd, as I saw it in the days of the revolution. Another very striking resemblance is that now and then invalided soldiers are seen begging."

BERLIN, Dec. 8, (via Copenhagen.)—The Cologne Volkszeitung, a Centrist organ, publishes an article requesting President Wilson to visit Cologne, which is comparatively near Paris.

The Cathedral might prove an attraction for the American President, it is set forth, but the main thing is that Mr. Wilson could then see with his own eyes and certain matters might easily be settled if personally discussed. To this end representatives of the Foreign Office in Berlin, it is proposed, might proceed to Cologne.

PARIS SUSPICIOUS OF EBERT.

Reports of Proceedings in Berlin Received Skeptically.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—The report of an attempt at a coup d'etat in Berlin by which Ebert was to become President of a German republic and the members of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Executive Committee were seized by troops reached Paris this afternoon without modifying in the slightest degree the deep-seated French skepticism concerning the internal reforms of Germany.

Ebert is credited here with trying hard to preserve order, and to that extent is approved by the French, because they know that order is the first essential to put Germany in a position to pay for war damages. But in a political sense Ebert is suspected of being a mere tool of the old régime, whose difficult task it is to pave the first stages of the road to the restoration of the Hohenzollerns months or years hence.

WARN OF WRECKING GERMAN INDUSTRY

Socialists of Both Wings Oppose Attempt at Radical Reconstruction Now.

BANKERS' FEARS ALLAYED

Government Commission to Frame Economic Change Has No Program Yet.

BERLIN, Dec. 8, (Associated Press.)—The commission appointed by the present Government to work out a plan for economic socialisation has held its initial session, but beyond organising it has adopted no specific program of procedure.

The Berlin Boerse and banking and industrial circles, so far as the correspondent has been able to ascertain, do not expect the immediate enactment of radical measures. The impression prevails that the Ebert-Haase Government is convinced that the present political and economic situation is inauspicious. This seems to have been confirmed by recent utterances of the leaders of both wings of the social democracy.

Eduard Bernstein, who represents the revolutionary government in the national Ministry of Finance and who with Carl Kautsky, Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the Soldiers' and Workmen's Government, shares the intellectual leadership of the Independent Socialists, in a speech last night said that the most urgent problem at present was the maintenance of the nation's economic system.

"Socialization cannot come over night," said Herr Bernstein. "It can only be carried out gradually, but it is bound to come, for the people now are sovereign. Our important weapon is suffrage reform, which is now a fact. It will completely reconstruct society and eventually lead to State control of important industries."

Herr Bernstein said that he was opposed to confiscation or expropriation.

"Our present situation is most critical—more so than most of us realise," he added. "We are lacking in raw products, foodstuffs and other commodities, to procure which we shall require immense amounts of money.

"We cannot seize the wealth of the rich people, for then the whole system of production would become paralyzed. Our State railways, which in bygone years netted a surplus of 6,000,000,000 marks, now show a deficit of 1,000,000,000. Our credit abroad is undermined, the Dutch and Swiss banks refusing us accommodations because of the instability of our economic conditions."

Paul Hirsch, Prussian Minister of the Interior and one of the leaders of the Majority Socialists, in an address said that the date fixed for the National Assembly was too remote and that immediate convocation of the Assembly was an urgent necessity for the purpose of giving the new State organization needed stability.

Emil von Strauss, one of the leading Directors of the Deutsche Bank, said he was of the opinion that the Government would make haste slowly in carrying out its program for economic radicalization, and that the final decision would be rendered by the people. He declared that there was imperative need of avoiding extreme measures, which might impair German credit abroad, as the country naturally expected to enter the world markets as buyer and seller.

The seizure of the nation's gold supply by the Entente, Herr von Strauss said, would mean the destruction of Germany's credit basis and would result in financial anarchy and inability to purchase foodstuffs, which was the first requisite toward righting the present situation.

HARDEN SAYS KAISER WAS FORCED INTO WAR

Calls Ex-Ruler a Tool of Militarists and Declares He Ought to Have Been a Showman.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The Daily Express's Berlin correspondent telegraphs an account of a conversation he had with Maximilian Harden. Asked what part the Kaiser played in willing the war, Harden replied:

"He had no personal part. He was discredited in this country, and was a mere tool in the hands of the military party, which looked on him as a coward and was afraid that when the moment came to declare war he would refuse to sign the declaration. So, when 'The Day' arrived they sent him away on a trip to Norway."

"Then, if the Kaiser is not guilty, who are the guilty parties?" asked the correspondent.

"All our Generals were guilty," was the reply. "But if I tell you the names and the persons are handed over their blood will be on my head."

Asked for his opinion of the Kaiser, Harden replied:

"You know what I suffered because of him; so I cannot be accused of partiality. But the impression abroad concerning the Kaiser is a false one. Foreigners saw the façade, but not the interior.

"I want you to see the Kaiser as he really was—a man who, because of his physical infirmities, was unable to dress himself, unable even to eat without using a special gold implement, a knife and fork made in one piece. He was always talking about the old German God, but what was the old German God doing in Turkey and Bulgaria?

"The fleet was his plaything. He was never happier than when posing in the limelight. It did not matter what was the part—warrior, horseman, sailor—all were the same to him. He was a man who missed his vocation."

Asked what was his vocation, Harden said;

"Oh, he should have managed a cabaret or taken a show on a tour. He was a great showman."

Harden became thoughtful as he spoke of peace.

"Even before America entered the war I knew we could not be victorious," he said. "But when she came in I knew we should be beaten, and I fought with the censors to tell this to the German people. When Wilson published his fourteen points I advocated that we should accept them, because I knew we could not have better or more favorable conditions."

Speaking of the relations between Germany and the Allies, Harden remarked:

"There are millions of Germans who are sincere and the Entente should not treat us as it would treat the militarists, but should treat us as men. The armistice terms are very hard. If the Allies base the peace terms on the armistice conditions, then Germany is ruined.

"Without Alsace-Lorraine and Silesia Germany can never be an industrial country. The loss of the Lorraine iron fields will be disastrous."

POSEN HAILS FREEDOM.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 7.—An extraordinary demonstration took place on Tuesday in the town of Posen, which, according to a local paper, the Neueste Nachrichten, was decorated as for the greatest festivals. Every street was decked with the Polish colors, the white and red flag being displayed in every window. The whole population, in national costume, was in the streets. Order was preserved by a civilian guard, by Polish Scouts, and by soldiers and sailors, all of whom wore the Polish colors.

A great demonstration was held in the market place, and the crowd then marched to and quickly filled the great church. National airs was played, and shouts of "Long live United Poland!" were raised in the tremendous concourse of people. Men, women, and children paraded the streets.

In the church, Archdeacon Stychel, who is leader of the Polish Party in the Reichstag, preached a sermon in which he said that for hundreds of years the people had prayed for the restoration of their Fatherland and their freedom. Now their prayers were being heard, and "here and now the Polish people, solemnly before God and before those great nations who have decided the destiny of the world, demands full national freedom and independence."

As the journal quoted says, this great demonstration has reduced to nothing all the German pretensions to rule over the Province of Posen and all the German statistics to bolster the claim that it belongs to Germany.

PLEA FOR 1920 TAXES IN REVENUE BILL

Senate Committee Report Says Country Has Right to Know What to Expect.

WAR PROFITS TAX AN EVIL

Plan for 1919 Is $4,600,000,000 from Income and Profits, $1,200,000,000 from Other Sources.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—In a majority report of the Senate Finance Committee, completed today, Senator Simmons, Chairman of the committee, explains the essential features of the new War Revenue Bill, under which it is planned to raise $5 978,486,000 for 1919 and which stipulates a maximum yield of $4,600,000,000 for 1920. The majority report goes to the Senate tomorrow, when debate on the War Revenue bill begins.

A minority report, combating the provision for the 1920 tax, which is opposed by the Republican Senators on the committee as having no place in the revenue measure for 1919, is being prepared by Senator Penrose.

Senator Simmons alluded to Secretary McAdoo advising, on Nov. 14, that the revenue bill be altered so as to yield $6,000,000,000 during 1919, and that it provide that not less than $4,000,000,000 be imposed for 1920. He quoted the Secretary as estimating that the Government's expenditures for the year ended June 30, 1919, would be in the neighborhood of $18,000,000,000. Discussing the provision for the $4,000,000,000 yield for 1920, Mr. Simmons says:

"The committee was of the opinion that provision should be made in the present bill for the termination, after 1919, of the war profits tax and for the reduction of the excess profits tax. The country has a right to know how soon and in what degree the burden of war taxes can prudently be reduced. During this period of reconstruction, however, business (particularly new business) is entitled to go forward without the burden of an 80 per cent. tax upon profits. In time of peace the existence of an 80 per cent. profits tax would be a positive evil, for the perpetuation or continuance of which no sufficient reason has or could be given.

"For the year 1920, therefore, the committee recommends that the war profits tax or bracket be abolished; and that the rates of the excess profits tax be substantially lowered; and that the rate of normal tax be reduced by one-third; i.e., in the case of corporations from 12 per cent. to 8 per cent. and in case of individuals from 12 and 6 per cent. to 8 and 4 per cent. It is estimated that these changes would reduce the revenue for 1920 as compared with 1919 by approximately $1,400,000,000 and that there would be net reduction from other miscellaneous sources of about $500,000,000 attributable chiefly to shrinkage in the yield of beverage taxes. With respect to taxes other than income and profits taxes the committee recommends no change in rates for the fiscal year 1920.

Provision New to Tax Laws.

The report refers to a new section dealing with deductions for net losses in the income tax as "one of the most important provisions of the bill" and one "quite new to our tax laws."

Going to the excess profits tax, the report says:

"In the first place, the committee does not recommend that individuals and partnerships be brought under the war excess profits tax, but follows the provisions of the House bill to an alternative plan at the same rates. It unifies the two taxes by the simple device of including the war profits tax as an additional bracket of the rate schedule.

"The committee has also simplified and reduced the rates of the excess profits tax adopted by the House. It proposes in lieu of the House brackets of 35, 50 and 70 per cent. two brackets of 30 and 60 per cent., with no change in the deduction or 'excess profits credit.' The third bracket of the committee plan is, as stated before, simply the war profits tax of 80 per cent.

"The preceding rates are applicable only to taxes payable in 1919 covering income for the year 1918. For the year 1920 and thereafter the war profits tax (or bracket) is repealed and the excess profits rates are reduced from 30 and 40 per cent. to 20 and 40 per cent."

WASHINGTON REBUFFS TEUTON NOTE WRITERS

German and Austrian Governments Told to Address Communications to All Allies.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Notes were sent to Berlin and Vienna by the State Department today advising the German and Austrian Governments that the United States desires to receive no further communications from them which should properly be addressed to all the allied nations. A note of similar purport previously had been dispatched to the German Government as the result of requests that the armistice terms be modified.

been used in modern history in a selfish and aggressive manner, and that it has on four separate occasions in four separate centuries—against Philip II. of Spain, Louis XIV., Napoleon, and the Kaiser—successfully defended civilization from military tyranny, and particularly preserved the independence of the Low Countries.

"In this greatest of all wars the British Navy shielded mighty America from all menace of serious danger, and when she resolved to act it was the British Navy that transported and escorted the greater proportion of her armies to the rescue and deliverance of France. Our record in a hundred years of unquestioned naval sway since Trafalgar proves the sobriety of our policy and the righteousness of our intentions. Almost the only ports in the world open freely to the commerce of all nations were those of our islands. Its possessions and our coaling stations were used freely and fully by the ships of all nations.

"We suppressed the slave trade. We put down piracy. We put it down again the other day. Even our coastwise traffic, so jealously guarded by every power in the world, was thrown open to all comers on even terms by that ancient people in whose keeping the world has been wisely ready to intrust the freedom of the seas.

"We are sincere advocates of a League of Nations. Every influence Britain can bring to bear will be used to make such a league a powerful reality. This fine conception of President Wilson has been warmly welcomed by British democracies all over the world. We shall strive to faithfully and loyally carry it into being and keep it in active benefit and existence. But we must state quite frankly that a League of Nations cannot be for us a substitute for the British Navy in any period that we can foresee."

Protests About Hearst.

Protests against the action of Mayor Hylan in naming William R. Hearst as a member of the committee to welcome the returning soldiers, as well as Chairman of the committee to arrange for the erection in France of a memorial to the soldiers from New York who fell in the war, continued to be received yesterday. Among them were letters from Henry B. Haigh, President of the Moore Filter Company of 43 Exchange Place, and Mrs. William Jay, as Chairman of Mrs. William Jay's Committee for the Severance of All Social and Professional Relations with Enemy Sympathizers.

PARIS SWINGS TOWARD WILSON

City Admires the President's Defiance of Tradition.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—The apparent revulsion of feeling as evidenced by the send-off given the President on his sailing from America has its counterpart here. There is something about his defiance of tradition, his disregard of opposition and indifference to all risks that inspires confidence.

The great lonely figure faring across the seas to bring to Europe his quiet challenge to high ideals makes a romantic appeal. One encounters among Americans here growing confidence that with such intrepid leadership the policy of abstract justice may prevail against the elemental urge of individual national interest aroused by the complete victory over the cruel enemy.

WILSON TO VISIT POPE DEC. 23.

Italian Officials Arrange Welcome to President in Rome.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—Thomas Nelson Page, the American Ambassador to Italy, visited the Vatican yesterday and announced that President Wilson would pay an official visit to Pope Benedict and Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal Secretary of State, on Dec. 23, according to a dispatch to the Temps from Rome today.

ROME, Dec. 8.—The officials of the Foreign Ministry held a conference today at the American Embassy to decide on the program for President Wilson's visit to Rome. Some difficulty is being encountered because it is not known how long the President will be here.

President and Mrs. Wilson and the President's party will be met at the station by all the members of the Cabinet, Prince Colonna, the Mayor of Rome, representatives of the Roman municipality, and prominent Italians who wear the collar of the Order of Annunziata, which entitles them to rank as cousins of the King.

Clubs and political associations have arranged for demonstrations in the streets through which the President will be driven. There will also be a demonstration in the square in front of the Royal Palace.

President and Mrs. Wilson will pay a visit to Dowager Queen Margherita, and afterward will have luncheon with the royal family. In the afternoon the President will place wreaths on the tombs of King Victor Emmanuel II. and King Humbert in the Pantheon. There will be a gala dinner, probably the same evening, at the court, at which King Victor Emmanuel and President Wilson will exchange toasts.

At the Capitol next day the solemn ceremony conferring Roman citizenship on the President will take place. This will be followed by an official luncheon at the American Embassy, whence the President will start for his visit to Pope Benedict. The rest of the program for the President's stay has not been definitely decided.

Requests are pouring in from all kinds of organizations and many cities of Italy which desire to pay honor to President Wilson.

The Republic of San Marino has asked the honor of presenting greetings and homage from the oldest and smallest republic in the world to the representative of the most powerful and modern one.

POPE FAVORS PEACE LEAGUE

Mgr. Fay Lectures on Pontiff's Hopes for the Future.

Mgr. Sigourney W. Fay lectured before the League for Political Education yesterday in Carnegie Hall on "The Pope in Relation to Permanent Peace." It was explained after the meeting that Mgr. Fay went abroad as a member of the American Red Cross wearing the Red Cross uniform, and that he went as a representative of Cardinal Gibbons at the invitation of the Red Cross. It was said that, through the good offices of the Papal Secretary of State, the Monsignor had a private audience with the Pope.

Mgr. Fay said the war was now a thing of the past, and that the nations could confidently prepare for the future. "Two ways are open to the world," he said. "One is to revert to the old system of penalties and reprisals, and the continued maintenance of huge armaments. The other is a league of nations to protect each other from unwarranted aggression." He favored the latter.

Mgr. Fay said that in the opinion of the Pope, expressed last February to the speaker, the two greatest ecclesiastics in the world were Cardinal Gibbons and Cardinal Mercier. The greatest man, in the influence he will bring to bear on the nations, is the President of the United States, said the speaker.

Mgr. Fay concluded by saying that as head of the Catholic Church, the Pope should have a voice in guaranteeing a permanent peace. He said the Pope had three points in mind, first, the League of Nations; second, disarmament of nations to such a point that no one would dare to start war, and last, a court of international appeals with coercive powers. Given these, the world would continue to enjoy the blessings of peace, declared the speaker.

PROPOSES NATIONAL RAILWAY SYSTEM

New Jersey Representative Offers Bill to Solve the Vexing Problem.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—A bill to bring about a national railway system under Federal incorporation and charter was introduced in the House today by Representative E. W. Gray of New Jersey. The plan suggested is unique in that it makes participation in the proposed system a matter of voluntary action on the part of the railways. A Board of Directors in which the Government, the stockholders, the bondholders and the employes shall be represented, is created by the bill, which also gives the employes not only a voice in the direction of the road, but a share in surplus earnings.

In explanation of his bill Mr. Gray made this statement:

"An outstanding feature of the proposal made in this bill is that a direct monetary appeal is made not only to the stockholders and bondholders, but also to the employes and to the Government, the design being so to balance the selfishness of each of these four 'parties in interest' against the selfishness of the rest as to avoid abuses and to assure maximum service to the public.

"The labor issue is met squarely. Lockouts and strikes are declared unlawful pending final determination of appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission or from that commission to the courts and individual penalties of fine or imprisonment or both are provided for any violator whether a Director, officer, or other employe. At the same time, employes are given a voice in the management and a share in surplus earnings, the distribution to employes being so arranged as to place a premium upon loyalty and efficiency.

"If this bill is enacted into law all railways of the country will eventually be acquired and consolidated by one corporation which will not be financed by the Government, nor will there be any Government guarantee of its securities. It will be specifically exempt from any and all forms of Federal taxation, except impost duties. In return, the Government will share in surplus earnings, but it cannot receive a dollar from the corporation until after the payment of interest charges, the setting up of a cumulative sinking fund and the payment of a small cumulative dividend to stockholders. Thirty per cent. of surplus earnings will be paid into a tax fund and the balance remaining in this fund after payment of State of municipal taxes will be paid to the Government. Twenty per cent. of surplus earnings will go to the employes, a like amount to stockholders as an additional dividend, 20 per cent. will be used for additions and betterments, and 10 per cent. will be placed in an emergency reserve fund.

ENSIGN BINGHAM DROWNED.

New Yorker Among Seven in Destroyer's Shore Party Lost.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The drowning of Ensign William E. Bingham of New York City and six enlisted men of the destroyer Lansdale, when a boat carrying a shore liberty party was swamped in Tangier harbor, was reported to the Navy Department today by Vice Admiral Sims. Ensign Bingham's mother lives at 59 Morningside Avenue, New York.

The enlisted men lost were Thomas Reed, Kansas City; George Fowler, Lynn, Mass.; Frank A. Willeke, Washington, D. C.; Delbert Evans Schulze, Swissvale, Penn.; Minor Allen Long, Chidester, Ark., and Thomas Melvin de Witt, Muncie, Ind.

No New Trial for Convicted Editors.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—In the Federal District Court today a new trial was refused to two editors and three members of the business staff of the Philadelphia Tageblatt, recently convicted of violating the espionage act. The men were convicted on charges of having published articles inimical to the United States in time of war, and of having distorted news dispatches. They will be sentenced later. The defendants are Louis Werner, editor in chief; Martin Darkow, managing editor; Peter Schaefer, President; Paul Vogel, Secretary, and Herman Lemke, business manager.

Pershing Reports Advance.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—General Pershing's report for last night says: "Units of the Third American Army north of Boms advanced today, reaching the line Meckemheim-Kempenich. South of Kempenich our lines remained unchanged."

HEARST LETTERS TODAY IN INQUIRY

When the hearing is resumed tomorrow, Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard University, whose name appeared on the Fuehr list of German sympathizers, will take the stand. Dr. Hart will probably testify most of the morning, and, when he is through, the Hearst documents, it is expected, will be produced.

Untermyer Asks to Testify.

Samuel Untermyer, whose letter to Dr. Albert, the German Commercial attaché, told of the proposition to buy a New York newspaper, said to have been The Sun, also requested permission to appear before the committee tomorrow. His request was denied, and Senator Overman informed him that he would be notified when the committee was ready to hear him.

The status of The Staats-Zeitung during the period of American neutrality came up just ahead of the Fuehr documents relating to the Hearst and other newspapers.

"The Staats-Zeitung of New York," said Mr. Bielaski, "was to present what I may term the German viewpoint to German-speaking people. That Bernard H. Ridder of that paper was concerned in some of the activities of the German Embassy crowd is proved by a letter in our files written to Captain von Papen, the Military Attaché, in June, 1915.

That letter was as follows:

New-Yorker Staats-Zeitung,
The Great German Medium,
Established in 1834.
182 William St., corner Spruce St.,
New York City, June 21, 1915.

Captain von Papen,
Care G. Amsinck & Co.,
6 Hanover St., New York City.

My Dear Captain: The party that I sent out West has enlisted the services of some rich Chicago friends and will continue the propaganda which we have started. They are sending out several men in the Far West for the purpose of combining strength for the man they are interested in. We have nothing to do with that matter financially or otherwise. I advanced him $200, which he has used for the purpose as outlined to you.

We have furthermore spent $295 in Greater New York among the labor element and in sending the man to Boston on Friday. This campaign is now finished so far as we are concerned, and, personally, I believe the money used for it has been particularly well spent. The Staats-Zeitung advanced this $495 as explained by me to you.

The fund of $9,000 which has been subscribed for agitation among the labor parties has been increased by $4,000 more. Labor meetings will be held throughout the West this week and next week. I feel sure that the cause of peace has been very much advanced during the last ten days.

Very truly yours,
BERNARD H. RIDDER.

Von Papen's Reply.

"Von Papen's reply to that letter," Mr. Bielaski continued, "was as follows:

New York, July 1, 1915.

My Dear Mr. Ridder: In reply to your favor of June 21 and in pursuit of our recent conversation I beg to state that to my great regret I am for various reasons absolutely unable to refund to you any money that served political purposes.

Acknowledging very heartily everything you have done for our common great cause, I consider it imperative that the representatives of the Imperial German Government keep entirely out of the domestic politics of the United States of America.

Very sincerely yours,
VON PAPEN,
Imperial German Military Attaché.

Bernard H. Ridder, Esq.,
New York City.

According to Mr. Bielaski, the von Papen letter refusing payment was probably written for other purposes than indicated. This theory, he said, was proved by a letter dated July 6, 1915, and written by Dr. Albert to Captain von Papen, in which Dr. Albert said he was inclosing a cashier's check for $495 for Mr. Ridder.

"At the time of the Ridder-von Papen correspondence in July, 1915," Mr. Bielaski continued, "the agitation among laboring men in this country was at its height. Rintelen was here at that time, was very active as a promoter of plots, and what was known as the American Embargo Conference was getting into its stride. I may add that Captain Boy-Ed, the German Naval Attaché, was frequently in correspondence with the Staats-Zeitung regarding articles printed in that paper."

The mention of Rintelen's name occasioned a question by Senator Nelson as to the extent of that person's activities in this country. Mr. Bielaski replied that Rintelen had received a fund of about $700,000, and that of this sount about $500,000 was given to David Lamar, the "Wolf of Wall Street," who had double-crossed Rintelen and kept most of the money for himself.

"A Professor Hall in New York," said Mr. Bielaski, "recommended Lamar to Rintelen as being a man who might serve him in a useful way. Lamar quickly came to terms with the plot master and the result was the organization of the Labor's National Peace Council, of which ex-Congressman Frank Buchanan of Illinois was the first President. Lamar fooled Rintelen completely. Everything that happened in the way of a meeting or otherwise which appeared to help the German cause Lamar claimed the credit for. Why, he even claimed credit for a meeting in New Jersey at which ex-Secretary of State W. J. Bryan was the speaker."

Professor Hall, Mr. Bielaski said, had been decorated by the Kaiser. This was as far as the witness went toward identifying the man. Mr. Bielaski's further references indicated that Dr. Schecle, the former Brooklyn chemist, who made the fire bombs that were placed on allied ships by German agents, had made a complete confession concerning the activities of Germans and pro-Germans in this country. Dr. Scheele is now a prisoner in the custody of the Department of Justice.

At this point Mr. Hearst's name was again brought into the case.

"Of all the English language newspapers, I mean the big ones, published in this country, is it not true that the Hearst papers were the most pronounced in their pro-German attitude?" Senator Nelson asked.

"Yes, that is true," replied Mr. Bielaski.

"What about his, Hearst's, attitude after we got into the war? I would like to hear something about that," said Senator Nelson.

"Well, he was against our sending troops to France for one thing," the witness answered.

Mr. Bielaski then made the statement that Bernstorff had originated a scheme to place The Washington Post under Hearst control. Bernstorff, he added, suggested this as being 'desirable.'"

"How do you account for Hearst's pro-Germanism?" Senator Nelson asked.

"One reason was that he was violently anti-British, and he was also a friend of Bernstorff's."

"What of his attitude toward Japan?"

"He has always been violently anti-Japanese."

Calls Hearst Anti-Mexican.

"And how about Mexico? I want to know about that, too," Senator Nelson remarked.

"Oh, yes, he was anti-Mexican, too," replied Mr. Bielaski, "and, as a matter of fact, I think he went so far in 1917 as to suggest that instead of sending our army to France we keep it here for use in Mexico."

Mr. Bielaski at this point read the cablegram that Dr. Fuehr had sent to the German Foreign Office, in which he named American "neutral" newspapers. A member of the committee asked the witness if he thought Fuehr was right in his judgment of the attitude of The Washington Post. Senator Nelson answered the question.

"Oh, yes," he said. "That Washington Post was very bad up to the time the elder McLean died. For a couple of years we had just one fair paper in Washington, and that was The Star. I know, for I read The Post every morning and it made me swear all the time."

"Did I understand you," Senator Nelson continued, addressing Mr. Bielaski, "to say a day or so ago that Mr. Brisbane had made the arrangements for Dr. Hale to go to Berlin?"

"No, Sir, I did not say that. I said that a man named Merrill made the arrangements," Mr. Bielaski replied.

At this point Mr. Bielaski read into the record the following excerpt from the Fuehr diary:

"On the other hand, the attitude, friendly from the beginning, of the ten papers belonging to the Hearst Syndicate, which reach more than three million readers daily in all parts of the country, has recently become still more markedly friendly as a result of the boycott imposed by England upon the International News Service and the exclusion of all Hearst publications from circulation in Canada.

"Mr. Hearst has replied to the inconceivably short-sighted action of the British authorities against his news service in a series of sharp full-page editorials directed against the British censorship, which editorials must have considerably shaken the already weakened confidence of the American press in the news emanating from England. In the articles in question not only was the present English system of suppressing and distorting the truth subjected to annihilating criticism, but it was also shown that America has been for years systematically misled by London in its judgment of foreign peoples, as, for instance, of the 'degenerate Frenchmen.'

"Moreover, it was repeatedly demonstrated in detail by the Hearst papers that the situation of the Central Powers in the Autumn of 1916 was an absolutely brilliant one, while that of England and her allies was entirely hopeless. It must be emphasized that the Hearst papers are nevertheless not to be classified as blind champions of the German cause, since they print many things which scarcely could be to our taste; for example, occasional articles about the 'German danger,' an idea which has received fresh impetus as a result of the exploits of the U-Deutschland, and particularly of the U-53, and which is being used as an argument for the expansion of the army and navy.

"The fact is that the papers referred to stand upon the ground of a sound American policy, but with their sharply anti-English tendency are much more effective in support of our cause than newspapers with pronounced pro-German orientation could possibly be.

"Furthermore, the greatest value of the Germanophile attitude of the organs of the Hearst Syndicate is to be found in the fact that their influence extends not to a single city or to a small part of the land, but over the whole Union.

"An English critic, S. K. Ratcliffe, recently wrote in the Manchester Guardian concerning American newspapers:

"'Northern papers are of no account in the South; the most influential New York journals do not exist for the people of the Pacific Coast, and carry very little weight in the Middle States. Hence summaries of opinion . . . confined to a small number of papers published east of the Mississippi are imperfectly representative of the republic.'

"It is this correctly discerned evil of the geographical limitation imposed upon the influence of the foremost American papers which is practically overcome in the case of the Hearst organization. For the editorials which appear today in The New York American are printed tomorrow in the affiliated papers of Boston, Chicago, and Atlanta, and on the following day in San Francisco."

The witness next called attention to certain wireless messages which had passed between the Berlin Foreign Office and Dr. Fuehr with reference to a wireless news service between Germany and the United States. One of the messages to Dr. Fuehr told him to "inform Hearst to give Wilhelm full authority to arrange for wireless service."

"We, (the Department of Justice) suspect," added Mr. Bielaski, "that the Wilhelm referred to in this message was Dr. Wilhelm Bayard Hale, who was then in Berlin."

Mr. Bielaski said that the reply to the Berlin message stated that the best of all American news agencies to handle the wireless service was the International News Service.

"Mr. Hearst is the main spoke in this International News Service, isn't he?" Senator Nelson asked.

"Yes, Sir," said Bielaski.

Mr. Bielaski dropped the Hearst story and told of a proposition fathered by Henry Weismann of New York, former head of the New York State German-American Alliance, the late Dr. Hugo Schweitzer, Emil Kipper, and others, to get a newspaper to further the German cause in this country. Weismann, Kipper and the others fixed $2,000,000 as the amount needed to start or buy a "real newspaper."

"The German officials disapproved of the scheme," Mr. Bielaski said, "on the ground that any paper owned by Weismann and the others named would surely be considered as German and would therefore have no influence on American opinion."

After referring to Weismann as having been associated with Jeremiah A. O'Leary in the Friends of Peace Society, Mr. Bielaski told of German inspired efforts to create friction between the British and American Governments. The witness said that Dr. Albert spent about $35,000,000 in his efforts to get cargoes of supplies into Germany via neutral countries. The trouble the Germans had in getting past the British blockade was seized upon, he said, as affording an opportunity to cause trouble between England and America.

"Mr. Lindheim of the New York law firm of Hays, Kaufmann & Lindheim wrote a letter to Secretary Lansing," the witness said, "in which he said that the Wilhelmina was American pure and simple, and yet the fact of the matter was that Dr. Albert financed the whole thing, and there were no real American interests involved. The British seized the ship as they were expected to do, and the case went to the Prize Courts.

"A member of the Hays, Kaufmann & Lindheim firm went to England at the time, but the effort to cause trouble between the countries failed, and as far as I know the British kept the German owned cargo."

Indicted with Rumely.

The Kaufmann referred to by Mr. Bielaski is now under indictment as a co-defendant of Dr. Edward A. Rumely in The Evening Mail case.

A letter from a Chicago German-American, whose name was not disclosed, was read into the evidence. Among other things this citizen wrote that "you must not forget that Americans are not Germans and that for this reason their food must be specially cooked and served to their taste."

This same man added that "William Bayard Hale is the only one who is really doing something for us."

Senator Nelson mentioned that he was very much interested in the Bolo Pacha case.

"Well," Mr. Bielaski replied, "Adolph Pavenstedt, the New York banker who is now interned, knew all about him and was mixed up in everything that Bolo did. I may add that Bolo knew Mr. Hearst, but we have no reason to think that Mr. Hearst had any inkling of the real mission that brought Bolo to the United States. Hearst was introduced to him by Charles F. Bertelli, who was the Hearst correspondent in Paris and who came over in the same boat with the Frenchman.

"The only thing I know about Bolo that has not already been printed in the newspapers," Mr. Bielaski continued, "is a reference to him in one of Dr. Albert's papers. In December, 1916, Dr. Albert wrote a memorandum which read, 'Prepare telegram for Bolo.' This indicates that Bolo was in touch with the Germans at a much earlier date than has been supposed to be the case."

The dealings of Hannis Taylor with Labor's National Peace Council made a rather long story. Mr. Bielaski read a letter written in October, 1915, in which Mr. Taylor demanded his fee for the work he had done, writing that he thought the council might at least pay half of the money due him.

Assistant Attorney General John Lord O'Brian said that Mr. Taylor's opinions were printed on broad sheets, as he termed them, and circulated as pro-German propaganda through the West. Mr. O'Brian also said that Mr. Taylor was a speaker at one of the first conventions of the Peace Council. The delegates to that convention had their expenses paid by the German Government, although a majority of them did not know it at that time.

"Didn't this Peace Council also start a propaganda against our people loaning money to the Allies?" Senator Nelson asked.

"Yes, that's true," Mr. O'Brian answered.

"And is it not also true that the Federal Reserve Board issued some sort of warning advising against loaning money to the Allies?" said Senator Nelson.

"I think I remember something of that kind," Mr. O'Brian replied.

"Did not Taylor also prepare a brief of some sort in which he argued against the constitutionality of the Selective Draft?" inquired Major Humes.

"Yes, and I understand that the Supreme Court rendered an opinion in which he was rebuked for the tone of his brief."

Another phase of the propaganda touched upon by Mr. Bielaski was the work of the Libau employment bureau. Hans Libau is a citizen of New York. The purpose of the bureau was to take Germans and Austro-Hungarians out of munition plants. On June 4, 1915, Bernstorff sent a circular letter to all German consular officials in this country ordering them to make census of subjects of Germany so employed and report back to him without delay. He added that the information sought was for the German Chancellor.

"In case of doubt as to the output of the plant under suspicion communicate with Captain Boy-Ed at 11 Broadway," the Ambassador wrote the consuls.

Libau's "Employment Bureau."

"In connection with this movement," said Mr. Bielaski, "the German Government organized and financed the Libau Employment Bureau, with headquarters in New York and branches in the leading cities. Libau maintained that the bureau was a philanthropic organization, supported by private contributions, when, as a matter of fact, it was organized by the German diplomatic representatives in this country as a part of their war machine. Dumba, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, was also interested in the enterprise. All financial reports were made to Capt. von Papen."

Mr. Bielaski read a letter written by Dr. Theodore Otto, of Allentown, Penn., to Prince Hatzfeld of the German Embassy, in November, 1916, which reported on the work being done for England and the other Allies by munition plants in the Allentown district. Dr. Otto reported concerning large contracts for high explosives, shells, and shrapnel, and said he had been able to get drawings of these shells as a result of his good fortune "in establishing relations as a physician with some of the officials of these companies."

$7,500,000 for Propaganda.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—A. Bruce Bielaski, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, completed his testimony today before the Senate committee investigating brewers and German propaganda.

The witness said $7,500,000 was the cost to Germany of the propaganda campaign in the United States, the sum coming from the total fund of $27,850,000 held by the embassy in Washington. Part of the money went for the purchase of newspapers and the printing and distributing of literature and part of it was sent to German consuls over the country.

It was announced tonight that Alfred Becker, Assistant District Attorney of New York, who conducted an investigation of German propaganda, and Francis Garvin, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Alien Property Custodian's Office, will be examined later. Tomorrow the committee will hear Professor Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard University, whose name was in the "important list of names" contained in Dr. Fuehr's diary, and who has asked for permission to testify. After that the committee will adjourn for several days.

MAGNES SUBPOENAED TO TELL OF BOLSHEVIKI

The Rev. Dr. Judah L. Magnes, Chairman of the Kehillah and Chairman of the committee sent by the Joint Distribution Committee of Jewish Relief Funds in America last Summer to investigate the condition of the Jews in the Near East war zone, sent a letter to Deputy Attorney General Becker yesterday, asking for an authorized copy of the statement he gave to the newspapers for publication yesterday morning.

Mr. Becker answered Dr. Magnes's letter by serving him with a subpoena to present himself immediately at the Attorney General's office in the Emigrant Savings Building to tell what he knew about the activities of the American Bolsheviki.

Dr. Magnes appeared at the Attorney General's office yesterday afternoon and remained until after 6 o'clock. Other persons alleged to be Bolsheviki were with him. Mr. Becker said no statement would be made as to the result of his questioning of Dr. Magnes for a day or two. Dr. Magnes, before he had been served with the subpoena, issued the following statement:

"Deputy Attorney General Becker tells today of mysterious intercepted messages between Ambassador Bernstorff and Foreign Secretary Von Jagow, showing that I had acted in co-operation with German officials when I was sent in 1916 by the Jewish Relief Committees of America to survey the conditions of the Jews in Poland and other territories occupied by the Germans. Why mention mysterious intercepted messages? Of course I co-operated with the German officials of those regions. So did representatives of other American relief agencies, among them the Rockefeller Relief Commission. The German officials were the only officials in control of the country, just as they are in Belgium, where the Belgian Relief Commission co-operated with officials of Germany.

"Relief work in a country at war is impossible without co-operation with the officials there. Moreover, I was asked and encouraged to co-operate with the German officials by Ambassador Gerard at Berlin, by the United States Consul at Warsaw, and the State Department at Washington was also fully in touch with all the details of my activities in Poland, Lithuania, and Galicia. In addition to this, I have delivered public speeches and have printed a lengthy report on the trip and my findings. Why does Mr. Becker speak mysteriously of intercepted messages, &c.?"

PROF. D. E. SMITH PROTESTS

Teachers' College, Columbia University.
New York, Dec. 9, 1918.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the list of names given out by the Department of Justice and published broadcast last Saturday morning, which list is said to have come from the notebook of a certain German agent and to have contained the names of certain pro-Germans in this country, my own name appears.

I wish to protest most emphatically against the injustice of this act of the Department of Justice. If the matter had been investigated even for a few minutes it could easily have been found that from the beginning of the European war I have been emphatically anti-German; that I have assisted in every way in my power to circulate the literature of the allied cause, aiding the committees of both France and Italy, and that I have, it need hardly be added, done all that I could be expected to do for our own cause from the day we entered the conflict.

I am entirely at a loss to know how my name could have found place in any German notebook of any kind, but I am much more at a loss to know how any Washington official would have committed the crime of casting such an aspersion upon the reputation of an American citizen without the slightest evidence to support the truth except the fact that a name was written in the notebook of a German agent.

ECONOMIC CHAOS REIGNS IN HUNGARY

Coal Supply Cut Off by Jugo-slavs—Food Situation Precarious.

GOVERNMENT KEEPS ORDER

But Threatens to Resign if Allies Withhold Relief—Occupation Proceeds Smoothly.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Dec. 8.—The formerly subject nationalities of Hungary are now taking revenge for their cruel oppression by the old Magyar Government. The Jugoslavs, Rumanians, Ruthenians, and Czechoslovaks claim in all eighty-three Hungarian provinces; and since in all there are only sixty-three provinces, the rival nationalities are obviously claiming the same territory. The Hungarian State, under the present conditions, is practically the city and republic of Budapest, with the neighboring steppe to the Rumanian line.

The allied occupation is proceeding smoothly, and, according to Magyar papers, the Rumanian National Guard is scrupulously protecting life and property of all the nationalities in the occupied area. Czech military movements are opposed by the Magyar National Guard, and there is a good deal of skirmishing in northern Hungary.

Meanwhile the envoy of the Prague Government, Milan Hodza, a famous Slovak leader who was persecuted by the old régime for his defense of national rights, has been negotiating with the Magyar Minister of Nationalities, Jaszy, who published in 1912 a book advocating a Federal solution of Hungarian racial problems.

In an interview, M. Hodza says that a general agreement has been reached with the Budapest Government that eight whole and eight half provinces shall be recognized as Slovak. The Slovak country will form an autonomous State, united with Bohemia. The Czechs are organizing a plebiscite among the Slovak population, but a Council speaking in the name of the eastern Slovak provinces has suddenly declared that these provinces desire to form an independent Slovak State, linked with the Hungarian State by a customs union. Since the present Hungarian Government desires the formation of an economic federation of independent nationalities in former Hungarian territory, this declaration of the eastern Slovaks has slightly comforted them. But I certainly should not presume to express just now any opinion on the authentic desires of the Slovak peasantry of northern Hungary, except that they certainly do not want to be governed by Magyars.

In any case, the collapse of the Magyar hegemony has created an intolerable economic situation. The Hungarian coal fields are occupied by Jugoslavs, and the Czechs will not let coal through from their rich coal fields. No territorial agreements seem to diminish the economic pressure. In response to Viennese appeals for food, the Budapest Government says that it is uncertain whether it will be able to feed its own population, since the richest parts of the country are occupied by invaders.

Socialists Work with Karolyi.

A word, by the way, as to the present form of government. The Hungarian Parliament dissolved itself immediately after the revolution, and supreme power is exercised by a National Council of twenty members, representing all parties except Tisza's, which is down and out. This Council has appointed a coalition Government, headed by Count Karolyi, the last of the magnates, who is regarded as the strong man of the situation. There are two Socialist Ministers, and a young Socialist, Denesz Diner, assists Karolyi in foreign affairs. An electoral law for the Constituent Assembly has been passed, and a commission is studying land reform. So far the Government has kept comparative order, but it threatens to resign if the Entente does not secure economic relief.

Magyar nationalism is certainly in low water just now, and that wonderful Turanian secret society, whose emblem was seven stars and which aimed at uniting the seven Turanian nations, finds the present atmosphere rather suffocating. Magyar kultur has left 63 per cent. of the population unable to read or write, and the universal suffrage law has had to be limited accordingly. The Magyar Republic is paying a heavy price for the Prussianism of its predecessors.

Primarily responsible for this calamity is that evil Hapsburg system which first plunged the State recklessly into war and then allowed itself to be dragged into the abyss at the chariot wheels of Prussia, finally leaving behind it a chaos of unrestricted national hatreds and rivalries.

But at present the question is how is Vienna to get coal, to secure transport, and some slight protection against the Winter cold and the anarchy which will inevitably arise when all work stops. And there is nothing to eat. There is coal close by, in Bohemia, but Bohemia will not let the coal through.

Conflicting Claims to Territory.

Both the Vienna and Prague Governments lay claim to that portion of Bohemian territory in which the majority of the population is German. What the actual desires of this German population are can be determined only by a systematic, impartial inquiry, but at present passions are embittered by violent claims on both sides. Some public bodies at Brunner and other places have expressed a desire to join German Austria. Others would seem to prefer for economic reasons an amicable arrangement with Prague, while some of the manufacturers of Reichenberg and Elger, near the German frontier, want union with Germany.

The National Assembly in Vienna has laid claim to a large part of German Bohemia and has also passed a citizenship law which has reduced not only the Jews, but the 250,000 Czech inhabitants of German Austria to an inferior status. The Prague Government retaliates by the armed occupation of German-populated towns in Bohemia and by using against Vienna an economic weapon, that is, by holding back coal awaiting transport and by preventing the shipment of potatoes from Galicia.

But it is the wretched population of Vienna that suffers from the political disputes, in which at present it has not the least interest, and the desire for food may drive even this patient mass to a desperate onslaught on all politicians. It should be noted that the exploitation of the economic situation for political purposes is not confined to the Czechs. A German nationalist economic delegation headed by Langenhan has returned from Berlin with the promise of thousands of carloads of corn and coal. Since Berlin could not supply and has not supplied them, this declaration was obviously a specious trick designed to promote the movement for union with Germany, which is certainly not popular in Vienna.

The Prague Government, again, is not responsible for many excesses committed by the more chauvinistic groups of its own subjects, and frequently has to repress them sternly.

Here, at any rate, is a clear case for allied mediation and the creation of an agressive principle of self-determination.

Meanwhile Switzerland is sending a small supply of foodstuffs to Vienna on the understanding that it will be replaced by the Entente.

CROAT SOLDIERS REBEL.

Reported Dissatisfied with Plan to Unite Country with Serbia.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Dec. 9.—Strong dissatisfaction exists among the republicans at Agram with the decision of the National Council to unite Jugoslavia under the Serbian dynasty.

News has just been received here indirectly of disturbances among the Croatian soldiers on this ground, and the Agram Government, it states, has had to impose a preventive censorship.

From the same source it is reported that the Rumanians are unable to occupy Petrossény, a mining town in Southern Transylvania, because the Rumanian soldiers have deserted.

I cannot vouch for the accuracy of this news since it was received here from Budapest, which naturally is disposed to make the most of the dissensions of its opponents, but judging from recent events there is nothing improbable in the reports.

REBUKES SOLDIERS WHO OUSTED MINISTER

Bavarian Cabinet Declares Auer Is Still in Office—Mob Denounces Newspapers.

MUNICH, Dec. 8, (Associated Press.)—The Ministerial Council of the People of the State of Bavaria has made known officially its anger over the attack on Herr Auer Friday night, when a mob of armed soldiers forced his resignation as Minister of the Interior at the point of a pistol.

The announcement goes on to say that the explanation forced from Herr Auer under duress "is naturally void and the Minister remains a member of the Government." It is signed: "Government of all the People of the State of Bavaria, Kurt Eisner, Minister-President."

The mob which forced the resignation of Auer and then occupied various newspaper offices gave as the reason for the latter action that the newspapers had been deceiving the people throughout the war. Premier Eisner secured the withdrawal of the revolutionists from the newspaper plants after a time, but a statement which they left for publication in the Bavarian Courier, the organ of former Chancellor von Hertling, was printed in that journal when it managed to get out an edition at noon after the nocturnal interruption of its working force.

The statement said that the soldiers and workmen occupied the offices of the newspapers "which had lied and deceived the people for fifty-one months and bore the fearful responsibility of murder." The papers would henceforth appear under the soldiers' and workmen's direction, added the statement, which was signed by the "Revolutionary Internationalists of Bavaria."

The Courier explained that it printed this statement "to indicate what had happened."

After forcing the resignation of Herr Auer, the mob went to Premier Eisner's residence to tell him the news. Eisner asked them why they had not informed him of their intention.

"I should probably have advised against it," the Premier said. "Your action was certainly well meant and undertaken out of regard for me, but it was not good. If again you have complaints about something wrong in the Government, come to me. Now go quietly to your homes."

Germany Recognizes Free Esthonia.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—The German Government, according to the Berlin correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, has recognized the Republic of Esthonia, one of the Russian Baltic Provinces. According to this correspondent the Germans have evacuated Narva, a Russian town, eighty-one miles southwest of Petrograd, and also are leaving the Russian ports of Reval and Riga.

RHINE POPULATIONS WELCOME ALLIES

Authorities Express Relief at British Occupation of Cologne Area.

FRENCH SUSPECT DECEIT

Believe Their Obsequious Reception Is Designed to Cajole the Allied Governments.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—British advance troops reached the Rhine yesterday between Godesberg and Cologne, according to Field Marshal Haig's report from the Army of Occupation. (Godesberg is about twenty miles southeast of Cologne, near the Rhine, above Bonn.)

The Belgian forces aiding in the occupation of German territory have also reached the river. Cavalry units of the Belgian Army, it was announced today, have advanced to Urdingen, on the Rhine, twelve miles northwest of Düsseldorf.

The German population west of the Rhine becomes more cordial in its attitude toward the British as Field Marshal Haig's troops move eastward, according to an undated dispatch from the correspondent of The Daily Mail:

"As we approach the Rhine," the correspondent says, "our reception becomes more surprising. The authorities in such places as Duren say undisguisedly that they rejoice at our arrival. They give two reasons for this—that they are afraid of their own people and are afraid of starvation.

"The armed men guarding the arms in the barracks talk without rancor of their experiences in the war against both the British and French. An overwhelming desire for peace makes of these soldiers a strong instrument of social solidarity, at any rate for the time being.

"Danger signals are received at times, and on occasion cavalry and machine gunners are called for by the Germans for fear—generally, I think, exaggerated fear—of Bolshevist outbreaks of Russian character. The Mayors and their staffs act with admirable dignity, but much of the population is almost obsequious and servile to our men."

PARIS, Dec. 9.—General Mangin will enter Mainz, the bridgehead on the Rhine, this week at the head of the 13th and 43d Infantry Divisions, each unit of which has been cited for bravery.

To meet the wishes of various units which desire to enter Alsace-Lorraine and the Rhine provinces, the Government has decided, according to the Echo de Paris, to change, from time to time, the troops in the occupied region. French troops will be sent to the Rhine bridgeheads and the Palatinate and into the American sphere of occupation. These troops will be relieved later by other units.

The French Army of Occupation is being received everywhere in Rhenish Prussia in an obsequious manner, according to correspondents with the army. They report that shop windows have tri-colored cockades, and that in hotels the orchestras play French airs. The correspondent of the Matin says he is convinced that this behavior on the part of the Germans is to cajole the Allies, and is done on instructions from the higher authorities.

1,977 TROOPS HOME, TELL OF BATTLES

places with shrapnel and badly gassed. "The French and the Germans had a mutual washday agreement. One day the Germans would do their washing in the river, and the French would not molest them. The Germans would reciprocate by allowing the French to wash up the next day."

Officers returning on the Sierra who were at Château-Thierry told how one of the passengers, the Rev. Clay Jenning, Mitchell, regimental Chaplain, had single-handed held the Germans in that battle until reinforcements arrived. Finding that all the officers of his command had been killed or wounded, he jumped into a machine gun pit and operated the gun against the Germans until it clogged. Then he climbed out of the pit, and, amid a terrific shell fire, gathered up automatic pistols and rifles and sent such a fusillade at the advancing Germans that the onslaught was stemmed for twenty minutes.

"Well, they seem to think a lot of me on this ship. You know I am a minister, and if I did anything I do not think it a very great achievement," was the way the Chaplain turned away questions as to his gallant act.

Corporal Edwin Gillespie of Company —, 11th Infantry, said his company went into action 250 strong at Dead Man's Hill and emerged victorious with 1 officer and 13 men unscathed. Gillespie, who lives at 124 West Seventy-fifth Street, New York, was wounded in that action.

Several of the wounded soldiers spoke in the highest terms of Father Duffy, the Chaplain of the 165th Regiment, and said that he was in one of the base hospitals suffering from a wound when they left. Private Anthony G. Jindar of Cleveland told of the heroic work done by the men of the First Division against the pick of the Prussian Guards in the fighting in the Argonne.

"That was where Chaplain Flaherty was killed," he said. "He had been through the fighting at Cantigny and Soissons and attended men and continually under fire; during the Argonne battle he went out on an exposed knoll swept by fire to administer the last rites of the Church to two boys who were dying. He had barely reached them when the knoll was torn to pieces by an explosion in which he was killed."

Comfort Brought 411.

Lieutenant Harvey Conover of Chicago, Ill., who went to France two years ago and fought with the Lafayette Escadrille and for the last year has been attached to the 90th Aero Squadron, and who has been cited for the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre, was aboard. He flew on the western front. Lieutenant Norman K. Todd of Locust Valley, L. I., attached to the 77th Division, and who at Argonne received serious wounds, and Lieutenant S. J. Baer of Murphysboro, Ill., attached to the 30th Infantry, who at Château-Thierry was wounded in the cheek and eye, were also passengers. The latter was decorated with the Croix de Guerre.

The Hospital Ship Comfort did not reach her pier until 5:15 o'clock last night after all the men from the Sierra had been sent to the different base hospitals. She had 411 men on board, of whom 167 were able to walk about with the aid of crutches or sticks. The Comfort left St. Nazaire on Nov. 22, and put into the Azores for coal on Nov. 27, and stopped there two days. On Dec. 2 she encountered a tempest which lasted thirty-six hours and blew with a velocity of more than 100 miles an hour. The patients in the wards were thrown about a good deal by the tossing of the ship, and the others were unable to walk on deck with their crutches as there was a danger of being washed over the side. Private Levin Robert Richmond of Company E of the 158th Infantry died of diphtheria on Dec. 1, and his body was brought into port.

Brig. Gen. G. H. McManus, after consulting with the naval surgeons, decided the men should be left on board until the morning. In the general ward on the main deck, which was filled with men who had lost an arm or a leg, there was an air of gayety last night. The soldiers were dancing with their crutches to the music from a phonograph, and did not appear at all sad at being maimed for life. Most of them were well under 30 years old. Among the units on board were the 77th and 42d Infantry, and a few of the old 69th Infantry. Private James Carney of Company F of the old 69th Regiment, whose home is at 564 Greenwich Street, said:

"I got mine at Tardenois, near Château-Thierry on July 29. We were holding ground until the artillery got up and were under a heavy German artillery fire. Then we advanced and a high explosive shell did the rest for me. We lost heavily. I often had occasion to meet Father Duffy, but the only place you had a chance to meet that good man was at the front or the first-aid stations. Honest, I believe he is the most popular man in Europe."

Private John T. McSherry, who lived at 517 East Seventy-seventh Street and was with Company L of the old 69th, said: "Captain Merle Smith was getting a stretcher bearer for me after I had been struck when the Hun got him. I've been wounded twice—the first time in the right thigh and the second time in the left thigh. On both occasions I had bones broken and snipers dropped me."

Private Harry Sang, who lived at 99 Bristow Street, Brooklyn, said: "I was one of the Château-Thierry veterans. All I got was a compound fracture of the skull and a broken leg. From June 30 to July 19 in the Champagne district, the 69th relieved the French at Sergy. We were up against the Prussian Guard and we licked them. At one time the 1st Battalion fought three German regiments, and the 42d Division beat six German divisions in a two-day fight. I was dressing another chap's head when I got hit and with a little load of shrapnel in my head and one leg useless, I had to swim the River Oreq to get to the dressing station."

Yankee Girl the Best.

When Alexander Saber of the 13th Field Artillery, whose right leg was shot off in the battle of the Argonne Woods on Oct. 6, saw from the deck the Police Reserve women standing forward on the Patrol he shouted out: "It is a fine sight to see the face of an American girl again. The French girl may be all right, but give me a Yankee girl every time."

Corporal Nathan Cooperman of 671 West Thirty-sixth Street said: "I was wounded by shrapnel at Lorraine. I was also gassed and was unconscious for three days, and I suppose that was the reason I was reported dead. However, I am worth a bunch of 'dead ones,' and I am glad to get back to little old New York."

Sergeant John Conway, a member of the 9th Infantry, hailing from Newport, Ky., was shot by a sniper's bullet, which went through both legs and infection set in, with the result that he will spend some time in bed.

Sergeant Ole Olson of Kalispeel, Mont., in the 2d Division, 23d Infantry, who has been a soldier for six years, was wounded three times. He said: "First they got my left arm, I got over that. In another engagement they picked my right leg and after a time in the hospital I recovered from that, and then, I'm darned if they didn't get my left arm again, which as you can see is off. Yes, the Hun certainly had a design on my left wing."

While the Comfort was at Punta del Guarda, in the Azores, there was an explosion on board the American submarine 219 in the harbor which caused the death of four men and wounded seven more out of the crew of 26. Henry Russell, the Chief Engineer of the submarine, a native of San Francisco, who was on the Comfort, stated that he was blown into the water by the explosion and his clothing was on fire. When he was picked up by a boat it was found that his right leg was broken and he had several severe burns on the body.

Captain J. F. Dunbar, who commanded the Comfort, did his best to see that the patients were made as happy as possible on Thanksgiving Day, which was passed at anchor in the Azores. There were concerts on deck and below, and here is the dinner menu: Creamed tomato soup, celery, Queen olives, roast turkey a la Comfort, giblet gravy, sage dressing, creamed asparagus, baked potatoes, apple sauce, pumpkin pie, fruit, mixed nuts, coffee and cigarettes.

At 8 o'clock today the ambulances and the stretchers will be mustered at Pier 4, Hoboken, ready to transfer the wounded men from the Comfort to St. Mary's Hospital.

WANT ITALY TO QUIT JUGOSLAV TERRITORY

Complaint Made That Far More Is Occupied Than the Armistice Terms Provided For.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Formal notice has been given to the American Government of the purpose of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, formerly held by the Austro-Hungarian Government, to unite with the Kingdom of Serbia in a single Jugoslavic State and to insist upon the evacuation of Jugoslav territory now occupied by Italy.

Official texts were presented to the State Department of addresses by Prince Regent Alexander of Serbia and a delegation of twenty-seven members from the National Council of Zagreb, delivered at Belgrade Dec. 1. The Prince Regent accepted the proposal of the Zagreb Council for union under a Parliamentary Government, the delegation to sit provisionally at Belgrade as representatives of their people until a Constituent Assembly could be held within six months after the conclusion of peace.

After submitting the proposal for union, the Zagreb delegation said:

"We are profoundly grieved to be obliged to place on record that a great part of our natural soil is occupied by the troops of the Kingdom of Italy, which is allied with the powers of the Entente, and with which we desire to live in friendly relations, but we cannot recognize the opportuneness of any treaty, not even that of London, the virtue of which is in violation of the principles of nationality.

"We desire to draw the attention of your Royal Highness to the fact that the extent of the Italian occupation greatly exceeds the limits and regions foreseen in the clauses of the armistice concluded with the Commander in Chief of the Austro-Hungarian Army."

The Prince Regent in his address said: "The Government will have as its first duty to trace together with you the ethnographical frontiers of our entire nation. I have the right to hope that our great allies will judiciously appreciate our point of view, for it corresponds to the principles they have themselves proclaimed, and for which they have poured out so much blood. I further hope that this point of view will also be admitted by the Italian Government."

The Luxury of a Coat Lined With Fur

It warms a man mentally as well as physically. It gives one a sense of exclusiveness which (no matter how much we may decry the thought) is ever present with us.

We talk glibly of democracy, of liberty, equality and fraternity, but still whenever the chance comes we take pride in being singled out of the crowd.

A fur-lined coat is not a democratic garment. It looks distinctive and it makes a man feel distinguished.

The coat pictured is form-fitting, fashioned in fancy mixtures in gray or brown and is lined with marmot, with a collar of Hudson seal (dyed muskrat) or otter. Its price, $84.50, is not the least of its good qualities.

A House Coat at $8.75

Made of a strong durable fabric in a variety of serviceable colorings with fancy stripe or plaid back, which lends distinction to the garment.

FAVORS POST-WAR LOANS TO ALLIES

McAdoo Proposes That Congress Authorize Aid in Reconstruction for a Year.

MIGHT REACH $1,500,000,000

Opposition Appears In Ways and Means Committee—Moore Fears for American Trade Opportunities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9. — Secretary McAdoo, in a letter sent today to Chairman Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee, asks for legislation to permit this Government to extend credits to the allied countries for one year after peace is formally declared. The letter follows:

"Washington, Dec. 5, 1918.

"Dear Mr. Kitchin: In my annual report on the state of the finances for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1918, I called attention to the fact that, until certain of the allied countries could resume their normal activities, the United States should be prepared to sell them on credit, even after the declaration of peace, foodstuffs, raw materials, and manufactured products of which they might be in need, and stated that I should recommend the enactment of legislation extending the authority to establish credits in favor of foreign Governments, for a reasonable period and within reasonable limits, to meet needs growing out of the war. I inclose herewith the draft of a bill which is designed to confer such authority and recommend its enactment.

"Under the existing law, credits may be established by the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, only for the purpose of the national security and defense and the prosecution of the war, in favor of Governments engaged in war with the enemies of the United States, and the authority to establish such credits ceases upon the termination of the war between the United States and the Imperial German Government. If the Draft bill enclosed herewith should be enacted, the authority to establish such credits would be continued for the period of one year after the termination of the war, and, after Dec. 15, 1918, credits might be established, with the approval of the President, for purposes growing out of the war and after the termination of the war, in favor of the Governments of such foreign countries as were previously engaged in war with the enemies of the United States.

Conversion of Allied Loans.

"The obligations of the Allied Governments which have been acquired by the United States pursuant to existing law are, in form, payable on demand. Under existing laws the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to convert all such obligations, acquired under the authority of the First Liberty Bond act, or of the Second Liberty Bond act, into long-time obligations of such foreign Governments, respectively, maturing not later than the bonds of the United States last issued under the authority of this act or of said act approved April 24, 1917, as the case may be. The bonds of the United States issued under the Act of April 24, 1917, the First Liberty Bond act, mature June 15, 1947, and the bonds last issued under the act above quoted, the Second Liberty Bond act, mature Oct. 15, 1938.

"The provisions of Section 2 of the Draft bill herewith presented are intended to confer the authority at this time vested in the Secretary of the Treasury in regard to such conversion and to prevent a duplication of such authority in case bonds of the United States should be hereafter issued under the Second Liberty Bond act bearing a short date of maturity.

"The present appropriation for loans to foreign Governments in the amount of $10,000,000,000 is not increased in the Draft bill presented to you herewith. It is very difficult to estimate with any degree of accuracy how much of the present appropriation will be required for loans to meet the war expenditures of the foreign Governments, how much will be available for loans for purposes growing out of the war, and what will be the requirements of the Governments of the Allies for reconstruction purposes. The date of the termination of the war and the terms of the peace treaty are important factors, as well as the extent to which such foreign Governments will be able to pay for their requirements in the United States out of the dollar equivalent of our military expenditures abroad, by sales of securities or commodities exported or by the use of private credits.

Advances to Belligerents.

"The actual cash advanced to the allied Governments, together with credits dedicated to and made effective for specific purposes, aggregate $7,608,693,488.70, while credits established, but not yet advanced or made effective for specific purposes, amount to $611,647,218.30, bringing the total of the credits out of which advances have been or may be made up to $8,220,340,702. After providing, say, $279,659,298 additional for outstanding commitments and the continuance of purchases—largely of foodstuffs—for war purposes, the amount of the existing appropriation ($10,000,000,000) which will be available for use under the Draft bill may be roughly estimated at $1,500,000,000.

"The gross needs of the Governments of the Allies from the United States for after-the-war purposes they have estimated at a much greater total than $1,500,000,000, but I believe investigation will show a considerable reduction in such estimates. A part of their requirements may be provided by the treaty of peace through awards in their favor for reparation either in money or materials; a part will be provided out of the dollar equivalent of our military expenditures abroad, and a part of it should prove possible for these countries to finance through sales of private credits. A balance, however, is likely to remain which it may be impossible to provide other than by the use of loans from the Government of the United States, and the above amount of about $1,500,000,000 should be sufficient for the purpose.

"I cannot feel that victory has been really won in the war if at its conclusion the countries which have side by side with us borne the stress of the conflict are not supplied by some available means with credits to the extent that they may be unable to provide their own finances, so that they may procure in this country the supplies needed for their people and for the reconstruction of their economic life. From the standpoint of enlightened policy, the United States should put itself in position to provide the credits necessary to sell its surplus products until the establishment of normal peace conditions.

"The draft bill enclosed merely enlarges the existing powers to make foreign loans, so that, within the limits of the present appropriation and, if occasion should arise, the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, will be authorized to establish credits after the termination of the war from which, in the light of conditions as they develop and if it be clearly in the public interest, foreign loans may be made for purposes growing out of the war.

"I am sending a copy of this letter to Senator Simmons.

"Very truly yours,

"W. G. McADOO."

Text of Proposed Bill.

Section 1—That the proviso at the end of Section 2 of the Second Liberty Bond act, as amended by the Third Liberty Bond act and the Fourth Liberty Bond act, be and hereby is amended so as to read as follows:

Provided that the authority granted by this section to the Secretary of the Treasury to establish, with the approval of the President, credits for foreign Governments, as aforesaid, shall cease upon the expiration of the period of one year after the termination of the war between the United States and the Imperial German Government; and provided, further, that after Dec. 15, 1918, such credits may, with the approval of the President, be established for such purposes growing out of said war as the Secretary of the Treasury shall determine and, after the termination of said war, in favor of the Governments of such foreign countries as were previously engaged in war with the enemies of the United States.

Section 2—The obligations of foreign Governments acquired by the Secretary of the Treasury by virtue of the provisions of the First Liberty Bond act, the Second Liberty Bond act, the Third Liberty Bond act, or the Fourth Liberty Bond act shall mature at such dates as shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury; provided that such obligations acquired by virtue of the provisions of the First Liberty Bond act or through the conversion of short-time obligations acquired under said act shall mature not later than June 15, 1947, and all other such obligations of foreign Governments shall mature not later than Oct. 15, 1938.

Opposition Appears.

Among Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee there was some objection to granting the authority sought by the Secretary of the Treasury, and several Republicans opposed the idea in aiding foreign countries to rebuild their factories to compete with American industry.

Representative J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania delivered a long speech in the House later in the day, in which he strongly opposed the proposed legislation. He objected to the third of the fourteen peace terms advanced by President Wilson and said that if economic barriers were removed and credit extended to the allied countries for a year after peace the United States would be placed at a great disadvantage.

"We must not forget, in exercising our spirit of altruism," he continued, "that we have our own foreign trade to consider. Already we have expended nearly $40,000,000,000 in helping to win the war, and of that at least one-fourth has been spent in the extension of credit to nations associated with us.

"I want to warn this House and the country that, when the foreign nations are getting hold of foreign trade and America is losing it, people will ask who is responsible for aiding other nations to take trade away from America, and they will also want to know, in case we should become committed by the President to a free trade policy, who is responsible for allowing the removal of economic barriers."

Mr. McAdoo's request will be considered by the Ways and Means Committee at a special meeting next Wednesday, when both Mr. McAdoo and Assistant Secretary Leffingwell will be heard.

REDCROSS SEEKS RAREVASE

Sold in Error for $12 in Rush at Opening of Fifth Avenue Shop.

The Red Cross Shop, sponsored by prominent society women, which opened yesterday at 587 Fifth Avenue, the former residence of the late James B. Haggin, did a rushing business. Shoppers of small as well as large means found a dollar possessed a startling purchasing power, and every one contributed liberally to the revenue from sales which will be devoted to the comfort of wounded soldiers and sailors in hospitals over here.

After the day's business was over the following appeal was sent out:

"Will the lady, who in the rush yesterday, purchased at the Red Cross shop a crystal and ormolu basket vase at $12 kindly return same and money will be refunded, as an error was made in the price. It is felt that this rare vase, if sold at its proper value, will purchase so many comforts for our wounded boys, we feel no one knowingly would retain it."

[illegible] addresses were made by the following officers: George E. Brewer, U. S. A.; Major [illegible] the British Army, Major [illegible] der Heyden of the Belgian Commission [illegible] also by M. Guy of the French High Commission. The speakers were introduced by Walter Jennings, Chairman of the New York County Committee of the Red Cross.

Czernin Says Austria Proposed Cession to Germany As Offset to Alsace's Loss.

VIENNA, Dec. 9, (Associated Press.)—Count Czernin, former Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, told the correspondent that Austria in 1917 made desperate efforts to withdraw from the war, even to the extent of offering Germany the Empire's richest coal and oil province, Galicia, if Germany would surrender Alsace-Lorraine.

Count Czernin added that Austria's efforts were always defeated by General Ludendorff, the German Chief Quartermaster General, or other high German officials, who even went to the extent of asserting that they were willing to declare war on Austria if she made a separate peace.

SUE TO OUST CARSE FROM BOAT CONTROL

Stockholders of Submarine Corporation Allege Wrong Use of Money in War Contract.

NAME ONE "ROSS McADOO"

Influence of Government Official Sought for $25,000, According to Bill of Complaint.

Copies of a bill of complaint against Henry R. Carse, President of the Submarine Boat Corporation, asking that he be removed as a Trustee under a voting trust agreement, and alleging that he paid to one Ross McAdoo $40,000, of which $25,000 was to be used to influence a high Government official favorably to the bid of the company for a submarine contract, were circulated in the financial district yesterday.

Last night Thomas R. McCarter of McCarter & English, in Newark, N. J., said that the bill had been filed in the Chancery Court in Trenton; but as an afterthought said the papers had been mailed to Trenton yesterday morning.

"Suit has been started," said Mr. McCarter over the telephone, "and that is all that interests me."

The complainants, according to the copy of the bill, are Elihu B. Frost, a trustee under the voting trust agreement between Henry R. Carse and four other stockholders of the Electric Boat Corporation, and Antoinette F. Stout and Elihu B. Frost as executors of the estate of Calvin Frost.

The complaint alleges that Henry R. Carse mismanaged the affairs of the company and asks that he be removed and another trustee be appointed in his place. It also alleges that Carse has refused to give details of the company's business to Frost and that in the election of company directors Carse has influenced two of the members of the voting trust to vote as he want them to.

The complaint asserts that in April, 1915, Elihu B. Frost, Henry R. Carse, Lawrence Y. Spear, and other stockholders in the Electric Boat Corporation whose stock had voting power to vote for the election of directors of the company entered into a voting trust agreement to minimize the chance of sudden and ill-advised changes in the corporation's policy or management.

It further states that Carse persuaded Frost and Spear to increase the number of trustees from three to five, and that Stacy C. Richmond of New York and Thomas C. Dawson, then an employe and officer of the company, were added to the agreement.

It also asserts that when the agreement was made Elihu B. Frost was a Director and Vice President of the corporation and had held similar offices since the beginning of the corporation, in 1890, and that he had actively participated in the policy of the company, which grew from nothing to a large and successful concern.

The paper, in charging that moneys were paid to influence a high Government official in Washington in regard to contracts which the company was interested in, says:

"That in or about the month of November, 1915, while the complainant, Elihu B. Frost, was still supposed to be in control of that branch of the company's business (the Washington office) the said Henry R. Carse, without the knowledge or consent of said Frost, and without the knowledge or consent of the Board of Directors of said company, paid to one, Ross McAdoo, the sum of $40,000 in cash with the intent and for the purpose that at least $25,000 thereof should be used in attempting to approach and influence a certain high official in the United States Government, with the pretended claim that thereby the said company would secure favorable recognition in and about proposed contracts with the United States Government for the construction of twenty-eight submarine boats for the making of which said company had submitted bids."

The complaint at this point alleges that Ross McAdoo was not at that time employed by the company nor was he an officer thereof, and continuing reads:

"The said Henry R. Carse engaged said Ross McAdoo to go to Washington and endeavor to induce favorable consideration of certain bids of said Electric Boat Company for submarine boats, and in order to conceal his identity, said Henry R. Carse introduced the said McAdoo as 'Mr. Ross,' a person connected with the Electric Boat Company; and at or about the same time the said Henry R. Carse improperly, and for the purpose of carrying out his own ideas as to the methods to be pursued in the conduct of the company's business at Washington, without the knowledge of the complainant, Elihu B. Frost or of the Board of Directors of said company, placed the entire management of the company's business at Washington in the hands of the said Ross McAdoo, although he was not at that time either an employe or upon the payroll of the company, and in order to conceal the true nature of the transaction involving the payment of $40,000 by said Henry R. Carse to said Ross McAdoo, he went through the formality of having the said Ross McAdoo give to himself, the said Henry R. Carse, demand notes payable to said Henry R. Carse personally for the sum of $40,000."

Continuing the complaint alleged that Carse had himself elected both as a member of the board of the company and President of the Electric Boat Company, and that prior to December, 1915, he had himself elected as Chairman of a committee of three to select the persons to whom extra compensation was to be paid, and then paid and caused to be paid to himself out of the company's treasury $75,000. This sum, the complaint asserts, was in addition to his salary of $30,000 annually as President and $2,500 a year as a "so-called advisory committee." The bill alleges that the $75,000 was to reimburse Carse for the $40,000 he had paid to the person named in the complaint as Ross McAdoo.

The complainants further charge that the Electric Boat Company received no value whatever for the $40,000, and that there were no extra services rendered by Carse entitling him to any such amount. On this the complaint reads:

"Notwithstanding which facts the said Carse, by reason of his dominating influence over the Board of Directors of said company, in the month of February, 1916, improperly caused the members of said board to undertake to ratify the payment of $75,000 to himself as aforesaid.

The complaint further alleged that Carse, through his control of a majority of the voting Trustees, threatened the retiring Board of Directors in 1917 so that they would vote with him on all questions. His threat was expulsion from the directorate unless they complied with his demands, according to the complaint.

It is further alleged that Carse refused to confer with the complainant Frost on the business affairs of the company and instructed other officers of the company to refuse information of the company to Frost. In closing, the complaint reads:

"Forasmuch as the complainants are without adequate remedy, except in this honorable court, to the end that the said Henry R. Carse, as one of the Trustees under the voting trust agreement dated April 1, 1915, may without oath (an answer under oath being hereby waived) answer the premises, and that he may be removed from his position and duties as a Trustee under said voting trust agreement, and enjoined and restrained from exercising or pretending to exercise any duties thereunder, and all power or authority granted to him by said voting trust agreement, and that if necessary a successor to the said Henry R. Carse, may be appointed by this court, under its power, as Trustee under said voting trust agreement, with all the powers in said agreement contained to the Trustees therein named, and that a subpoena to answer, and a writ of injunction may duly issue.

"And that the complainants may have such other and further relief as may to the court seem proper."

Efforts to communicate last night with Henry R. Carse and other officers of the Submarine Boat Corporation and the Electric Boat Company failed.

JEWISH DRIVE NETS $1,800,000 IN 2 DAYS

Cable Messages Telling of Massacres in Galicia Spur Generous Giving.

GOOD COMMITTEE REPORTS

List of Individual Gifts of $1,000 or More and of Trade Collections.

Up to last night, which closed the second day of the Jewish War Relief campaign for $5,000,000, approximately $1,800,000 had been raised. The total of contributions yesterday amounted to $300,000. The money is to go toward rehabilitation and constructive relief for Jews in Europe.

Cablegrams indicating the urgent call for funds to aid those in need continued to be received yesterday by Felix M. Warburg, Chairman of the Campaign Committee. A message came from Herman Conheim, a New York silk manufacturer at Berne, saying that the recent massacres of Jews in Galicia had caused the suggestion to be made that the British Government permit a delegation of Jews to visit the regions where there had been pogroms to study the situation at first hand. Mr. Conheim was advised by the Joint Distributing Committee which has charge of the disbursing of funds to confer with the Dutch branch of the committee. The cable message also said that the destruction of property was great and that immediate monetary relief was needed.

The following cable messages from the committee's representative at The Hague were also made public:

Receiving daily calls for help from Galician Jews. Pogroms raging in many places. Militia joins mob. Jewish soldiers and population first disarmed so that they cannot defend themselves. Are at mercy of infuriated masses. In some villages not a single Jewish home left unplundered. What cannot be taken is destroyed. Legionaires and police either passive or join mob. Jews not admitted to militia, where notorious thieves and criminals are welcomed as members. In Roswadow Jews murdered. Jewish war widow maltreated, both arms broken, and killed. Five hundred Jewish families in danger. Cannot leave home, as there are no means of transit. At mercy of mob. Jews all disarmed before pogrom. Poles retain weapons.

Pogroms in free Poland indescribable. Jews in many villages and cities completely ruined. Many families maltreated. Left without shelter, food, clothing. Mobs take or destroy everything. Where nothing is left in homes doors and window frames taken. Mothers with new-born babies taken from bed and laid on bare earth. Bed and linen taken by mob.

The team captains and workers will meet every day at 5 o'clock at the Hotel Biltmore to make their reports. The meeting yesterday lagged, due to the tardiness of many of the workers, and Mr. Warburg requested them to have their reports ready at 4:30 so that they might make them known promptly at 5 o'clock. There will be no meeting on Friday, and the last meeting will be held on Sunday night.

Many encouraging reports were received yesterday by the Campaign Committee, James McE. Bowman, proprietor of the Biltmore, contributed a receipted bill amounting to more than $5,000 for the cost of Sunday night's dinner at the opening of the drive. Announcement was made that at a luncheon of thirty-seven members of the fur trade $50,000 had been pledged yesterday, due in large part to the knowledge that representatives of the Joint Distribution Committee are soon to be in Europe to report on the needs to be met. The State Department has already agreed to allow a committee to go to Europe for this purpose.

A canvass of the manufacturers in the industries embraced in the cloak, suit, skirt, dress, and waist trades yesterday obtained more than $100,000 toward its quota of $500,000. The Chairmen for the industries are Arthur D. Wolf and M. Stern. The drive on the east side is in charge of Abe Milliman.

The industries under the following Chairmen reported these totals for yesterday:

Announcement was made yesterday that a commission of seven of the American Union of Rumanian Jews would soon visit Rumania to ascertain what aid may be rendered Jews in that country. Kalman, Louis Dramant, Sam Schwartz, and one or more men from Philadelphia and a Western city.

FEW EXECUTIONS IN ARMY.

None for Purely Military Offenses, General Crowder Reports.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Not a single member of the American Army has been put to death since the beginning of the war because of the commission of a purely military offense, Major Gen. Crowder, Judge Advocate General, stated in his annual report today to Secretary Baker. General Crowder said this fact was the outstanding feature of his report.

"Very few death sentences have been imposed," he said, "and none of those imposed for purely military offenses have been carried into execution."

Records of the Judge Advocate General's office show that 12,357 officers and men were brought before general courts-martial, of whom 10,873, or 88 per cent., were convicted. More than half the charges against officers were listed under three heads: "Absent without leave, drunkenness, and conduct unbecoming an officer."

Convictions of enlisted men for desertion, the General said, were actually less than in the previous years, although the strength of the army had increased many fold.

The report shows that one enlisted man was tried and convicted of "being a spy," and that 773 men were convicted of sleeping on post.

SOCIALIST SPLIT WIDER

BERLIN, Dec. 7. (Associated Press.)—The entire bourgeois press and the majority Socialist organ Vorwärts today present a united front against the Spartacus group of Socialists. Vorwärts in its criticism of the Independent Socialists indicates that this newspaper finds it difficult to distinguish them from Karl Liebknecht's Spartacus group.

A savage onslaught against the majority Socialists and their representatives in the Government is made by the Independent Socialist organ, and that newspaper's almost enthusiastic defense of the Spartacus group is construed here as showing that the Ebert and Haase factions are swiftly approaching a break. Vorwärts spiritedly attacks the Haase party organ for its defense of the Spartacus group and Liebknecht and for its onslaught on the Ebert-Scheidemann faction, and asks whether the Independents have no sense of their responsibility when they endeavor to excuse Dr. Liebknecht's "vile activities."

Vorwärts refers to the Spartacus organ, "The Red Fling," as a scandalous sheet, and warns it, and incidentally the Independents, that any attempt to harm Premier Ebert and Scheidemann will find Germany behind these men.

The bourgeois press demands an immediate test of strength, and summons the Government to act. The Lokal-Anzeiger says that the Government is lacking in energy or freedom to act.

The Zeitung am Mittag says that returning soldiers are boiling with rage over conditions in Berlin.

"One could freely hear the soldiers say, 'The most sensible thing would be to have the United States annex us; then we would have speech and thought,'" says this newspaper, which adds: "This is all very well, but the Government is incapable of asserting itself, as it has virtually abdicated."

Vorwärts declares that the situation has resulted in a question of law and order or civil war. The Tageblatt suggests to Premier Ebert that after so many excellent speeches it is time for action.

The call of the Spartacus group for an industrial walkout has met with little response. The Labor Federation is not identified with Liebknecht's agitation and officially disapproves a general strike.

It is estimated by the Tageblatt that the number of deserters whom Berlin is feeding exceeds 60,000.

Premier Ebert and his Cabinet held a secret session with the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, discussing Friday's rioting.

The disorder has spread to Munich, where there were riots in the streets after the Radicals had broken up a meeting of the Democratic Party. Disorders are also reported to have occurred in Pilsen.

The independent republic of Schleswig-Holstein will soon be proclaimed, according to the Weser Zeitung of Bremen.

SAYS BRITISH WANT CHECK ON BURLESON

in those countries, but will very likely be ignored.

Mr. Deegan was asked if the British Government has an interest in the Commercial Cable Company, and he said it had not. He was then requested to give the history of how the British request came to the notice of the cable officials. He said that the London manager of the cables had been visited by a representative of the British Governmental Department who had made the request and asked that it be transmitted to the head, or American, offices. Mr. Deegan said that the Commercial's London manager had not advised officials which department had requested the action. He said that practically all of the British official business passed between Washington and London over the cable lines, and agreed that the request might have originated in the British Foreign Office.

"On Dangerous Ground."

The company made a statement relative to the filing of the second suit, which said:

"The case of the Commercial Pacific Cable Company is even stronger than that of the Commercial Cable Company, because probably no one could or would claim that the cable from San Francisco to China, Japan, and the Philippine Islands is needed for the transmission of peace messages or peace negotiations as claimed by Mr. Burleson. There is another feature of this new bill, namely, that Mr. Burleson is treading on very dangerous ground when he seizes cables landing on foreign soil; the allegation in this respect, incorporated in our bill entered today, being as follows:

That all of said cable systems, including your orator's, have landings on the territories of foreign nations, and upon information and belief that the consent of said nations to the United States Government seizing said system of cables, including said landings, has not been obtained, and that this constitutes a violation of the principles of international law that one nation shall not encroach upon or seize any part of the territory of another nation, and that all nations are very properly jealous of landings on their soil of cables controlled or owned by other nations and forbid it because it is liable to lead to international complications, and that even if the defendant should hereafter obtain the consent of said foreign nations to the seizure of said cables and landings on terms and conditions satisfactory to them, such terms and conditions, pertaining as they would to the occupation by the Government of foreign territory, would constitute the substance of a treaty which under the Constitution of the United States can be made only by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, which advice and consent have not been obtained, and that this is a violation of the Constitution of the United States. That all this jeopardizes your orator's cables, cable landings, and relations with foreign Governments, the disruption of which would work irreparable injury to your orator.

Speaking of the alias subpoena which the company's counsel obtained against Mr. Burleson, officials admitted that service had not yet been obtained. The subpoena calls for service at the specified residence of the Postmaster General, which, in this case, was furnished as the Hotel Belmont. Apparently, until Mr. Burleson decides to register at that hotel, Marshal McCarthy's chief deputy, Joseph P. McDonough, must continue to carry the subpoena unserved. It was learned that the attitude of the lawyers for the Commercial corporation was that Mr. Burleson would eventually accept service voluntarily, but that if he failed to do so his presence in court would be compelled through publication. It was made clear at the cable office yesterday that the suits would be vigorously pushed, and that every future move of the Postmaster General would be contested.

Last night the company announced that it had received advices that the British authorities had suspended the "urgent" classification of all cablegrams transmitted by wire through Great Britain. Under this classification messages marked "urgent" have been given priority over those not so marked, and a higher rate has been exacted for their transmission. At the company's offices it was said the suspension of this privilege probably was caused by a desire of the British administration to forward all messages in the order in which they were received.

FOCH ACCEPTS HYLAN PLAN.

Marshal Sends Thanks for the Freedom of New York City.

Replying to a message sent by Mayor Hylan offering him the freedom of New York City should he desire to come here, Marshal Foch sent a cable dispatch to the Mayor yesterday in which he said:

"I am profoundly touched by the sentiment which has inspired your message, and I thank you for your invitation. I appreciate highly the honor of the 'Right of the City' which the City of New York offers me. Please transmit, with my acceptance, expression of my warmest gratitude."

ENTERTAIN M. LAUZANNE.

Paris Editor Guest of New York French Newspaper.

Stephane Lauzanne, head of the French Bureau of Information and editor of Le Matin, was entertained yesterday afternoon by the Courrier des Etats-Unis, the French newspaper in New York City. The French Consul General was present. In his speech, M. F. Guego, editor in chief of the Courrier des Etats-Unis, said in part:

"We French fully appreciate the importance and usefulness of your work in America, where France will be in the future better known and better understood. Let me add that all our compatriots are grateful to you, because you are leaving here the knowledge of what the true Frenchman is. Our wish is that France should now be judged on the souvenir you are leaving in American circles, on your patriotic faith, on your energy, full of tact, and on those fighting qualities which you ally with never lacking courtesy."

Mr. Lauzanne thanked the Courrier and congratulated the editor for his work in defending the French and allied cause during the war.

Kangaroo Is The Shoe For You!

PAY more attention to your shoes, and you will find that you can pay less attention to your feet. Genuine Australian Kangaroo so cradles and cushions the foot, that in feeling the ease of walking you forget the effort.

Yet, Kangaroo is not a "health shoe," nor a "hobby shoe," not a clumsy, clumpy shoe that sacrifices symmetry to theory. It's not only best-walking and best-wearing, but best-looking—soft as Kid, serviceable as Calfskin, smart as Patent Colt, when polished. Large sizes a specialty.

Shaw-Walker makes indexes you can pick out directly from stock, filling your needs accurately, without requiring an expert to install—or to explain after they're installed. We make Filing Supplies—indexes, guides, folders and cards—which have Quality built into them—strong, sturdy, long-lived.

We can supply all the things you need to make your files up-to-date and profitable.

Furthermore — Shaw-Walker can supply you with a file clerk who will keep your files supremely accurate and neat, a file clerk who knows filing from the ground up—the basic principles, the short cuts, all the fine points. MUSIC

By James Gibbons Huneker

Edward Morris Plays the Piano.

Edward Morris is a pianist of charm and technical address. At Aeolian Hall he gave a recital yesterday afternoon, and gratified his hearers with his artistic performance. An American born, musically trained at the Peabody Institute, Baltimore, a pupil of Harold Randolph, he rightly enough claims to be "100 per cent. American." Nevertheless, his playing is neither American nor European; it is artistic. He appeared in this city last season, though we didn't hear him; but we are glad we heard him yesterday, as he belongs to that not too large group of public pianists who give pleasure merely by touching the keys; in a word, he has a musical touch, a musical temperament, with intelligence and plenty of poise and fire. He is young, only 24, and in some things singularly mature. He is expressive in lyric episodes, but, happily, not sentimental. His program on this occasion did not severely task his intellectual processes, yet it proved him both versatile and sincere. He began with three members by Rameau and Scarlatti, charged with antique grace. These he delivered with refreshing clarity and a sound appreciation of their historic values. When he got into deeper waters he did not fail. Chopin was represented by the F major Etude, Opus 25, No. 3, two Preludes in B flat major and B flat minor, the C sharp minor Nocturne, opus 27, No. 1, and the C sharp minor Scherzo, opus 39, the third in the list of four.

Mr. Morris's interpretation of Chopin was gracious rather than profound. He did not sound the dramatic heights and depths of the Nocturne, which Mr. Finck, in his book on Chopin, has called tragic. The Scherzo lacked weight, dynamic emphasis; it was not drastic, not sombre enough. In the two Preludes, the young artist was more in his element, the flashing scale passages in the B flat minor Prelude were dashingly played, a brilliant climax achieved. As encore he fingered with delicacy the G flat Valse of Chopin, beloved of Pachmann. It is a trifle, the Polish composer in a Salon mood, the old-world mood of 1840, artificial, yet winning.

A Schumann Sonata was printed as opus 39 on the program; it proved to be the familiar Sonata in G minor, Opus 22. With his fleet fingers the pianist soon reeled it off, but in the first movement missed its structural significance. It was there that we felt the absence of fibre, of a firmer grasp on dynamics. It was too literal. The romantic slow episode—surely lovelier music than Schumann's has never been penned for the keyboard—was tenderly sung. Mr. Morris has an ingratiating cantilena, but he blurred the rapid passage work in the Presto, that last movement wherein the composer bids the pianist to play "prestissimo possible," and at the close, still swifter!

The last part of the program was devoted to some interesting music by moderns: A. Walker Kramer, a poetic fragment; a piquant Etude by Arthur Hinton, an Englishman and husband of Katherine Goodson, a brilliant piano virtuosa; Gabrilowitsch, a well-sounding and deeply felt Elegy; Moszkowski's double-note study, and Rubinstein's staccato Etude. All were done ample justice to; the Rubinstein, taken at a breathless pace, was quite exciting. For encores to satisfy an enthusiastic audience the gifted lad—who looks younger than his years—played an unpublished octave study (?) also Chopin's Butterfly study and the C major study from Opus 10, No. 7. These were admirable specimens of polished pianism.

Contrary to our expectation the F major study referred to above was rather heavily handled. It has been called the Unicorn study; because of the suggestion of prancing of silvery, fabulous hoofs in a certain section; as a matter of fact it is a caprice of the Butterfly type, and is replete with harmonic surprises. Mr. Morris played it too slowly, and he did not make a sub-melody with the thumbs in the second reprise of the theme—where the brief shake is marked—a trait of both Chopin and Rubinstein's interpretation; George Mathias, a pupil of Chopin, assured me of this trait; Rubinstein heard and noted it. In conclusion, Edward Morris is a promising talent, but should avoid his facile triumphs. He has good stuff in him for the development of bigger things.

Ralph Lawton's Piano Recital.

At Aeolian Hall last night Ralph Lawton gave a piano recital. He is a pupil of Wassili Safanoff, who was one-time winner of the Rubinstein prize for piano playing and a popular conductor of the Philharmonic Society in this city. His pupil reflects little of the fiery, finished style of his deceased master. He possesses an excellent mechanism—a matter of course, nowadays, with all pianists—and he has a musical touch when he doesn't force it; but he often forces it. He played the Sonata characteristic of Beethoven in E flat, opus 81, A—the so-called "Adieux, L'Absence, Le Retour"—and while it was a restrained, even academic reading, it was on the whole satisfactory; also sentimental. Well, Beethoven no doubt was in the mood sentimental when he composed the work. The Rubinstein arrangement of Beethoven's Turkish March and Saint-Saëns's paraphrase of the Dervish chorus from "The Ruins of Athens," Beethoven's, revealed the bravura of the pianist.

He was more successful, however, in the third Impromptu of Chopin, a charming piece which was taken too slow, yet sounded well, was phrased clearly and given with proper sentiment. But the great F minor Fantasy, opus 49, was a disappointment. Mr. Lawton missed the nobility of the introduction and shattered the musical syntax in what followed: hardly ten bars were symmetrical; the tempo rubato degenerated into sheer time burglary, more's the pity, as some of the episodes were musical in tone and feeling. The long melodic line was choppy. We suspect that the concert giver was not at his best, for he had finger slips. The most interesting numbers he presented were three Valses by Ravel and his "Jeux d'Eau." The Mephisto Waltz, which closed a brief program, set us thinking how completely old Daddy Liszt dominated the modern Frenchman in both the orchestra and keyboard, Saint-Saëns, Dukas, Debussy, Ravel. Any one with a musical memory will recall "Au bord d'une Source," and the "Fountain Music of the Villa d'Este, two charming études by Liszt, when listening to this Ravel water music; Liszt with a difference, Liszt without the teasing dissonances of the younger man. But toujours Liszt! Mr. Lawton did not make much out of the Mephisto. He has genuine ability, and is still at the colorless professorial stage; or, has he just achieved it?

"Madama Butterfly" Sung Again.

Puccini's "Madama Butterfly" was repeated before a social Monday audience at the Metropolitan last evening. Mmes. Farrar and Fornia, Messrs. Althouse and Chalmers sang, and Mr. Moranzoni conducted.

MUSIC NOTES.

Raoul Vidas will play and Idelle Patterson will sing at tonight's Waldorf-Astoria musicale of the Rubinstein Club.

Roland Farley, a blind composer, who studied before the war in Leipsic, will play on Thursday at the studio of Alice M. Swift.

L. Cavilieri has resumed the People's Liberty Chorus rehearsals on Monday and Thursday evenings at the High School of Commerce.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Emily Stevens will be starred this season in a play by Rita Wellman, to be produced by Arthur Hopkins. Rehearsals have already begun.

Mary Harper has succeeded Jane Blake in the cast of "Nothing But Lies" at the Longacre.

Marion Hurley has been added to the cast of the Century Midnight Whirl, which will be seen on the Century Roof Thursday night.

"Good Luck, Sam," the Camp Merritt soldier revue, was transferred last night to the Knickerbocker Theatre, where it will continue for another two weeks.

EX-KAISER KEEPS EYE ON THE NEWS

castle grounds his movements are kept in strictest secrecy. Wilhelm's chauffeur has always his car in readiness, but he is never told in advance where to go. Orders are given to the policeman who sits beside the driver and who indicates the route as the car travels and as roadway turnings are approached.

I am told, however, that the presence of ex-Empress Augusta has had a calming influence on her husband. Before her arrival he was very restless, constantly wandering up and down the corridors of the castle or about the grounds, but he was never allowed to go beyond the guard. Since his wife has come he has seemed to be much quieter.

On the desk at which the fallen monarch writes are books of a religious character, including the Bible, Prayer Book, and psalmodies. Every morning service is held in the private chapel attached to the castle, which the ex-Kaiser, in company with members of Count Bentinck's family, always attends.

The dethroned Emperor and Empress take breakfast and luncheon and dinner with Count Bentinck's family. Dinner is at 8 usually, consisting of fish and game. Amerongen is apparently not exempt from the meat shortage. For instance, the menu on Tuesday evening was a simple hors d'oeuvre, soup, fish, and pheasant, with sauerkraut.

Mornings and afternoons, as I said, Wilhelm is at his desk. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon there is brought to him tea with biscuits. As things go in Holland, Wilhelm is in good luck, for the tea that he gets is such as the people in this country have not tasted for many months. At dinner he takes table wine; usually champagne also is served.

Ex-Kaiser's Press Clippings.

What time the ex-Kaiser can spare from writing he devotes to studying world news, "quorum magna pars fuit." This is placed before him daily in concise form. Every day there arrives by post a set of German newspapers addressed to "Graf von Millke." These are handed to a member of the secretarial personnel, whose duty it is to extract all information likely to interest the exiled monarch.

Quite by accident I happened yesterday to see with my own eyes one such batch of newspapers with items underlined in red ink for bringing to the attention of the ex-Kaiser. I noticed that all dispatches were marked which contained any reference to discussion in the British press over the future of the Two Hohenzollerns, father and son. I could not help thinking what very unpleasant reading they must have made for the principal villain in the piece. They were heavily scored with both pencil and pen.

In a copy of the Cologne Gazette was an account of War Correspondent Wegener's interview with the ex-Kaiser, in which the latter tried to put all diplomatic responsibility upon von Bethmann Hollweg and von Jagow. Wegener mentioned that the interview took place shortly before Wilhelm's flight to Holland, and I noticed that in addition to the marginal markings the word "flight" was underlined in red ink, apparently by a pen either spiteful or indignant. For the rest, the markings were of great interest as showing that the ex-Kaiser is still following with keenest attention the political developments not only in his own, but also in Entente countries.

I saw that in a Berliner Tageblatt article on political developments in Germany special attention was called by pencil markings to a passage suggesting that the forthcoming elections would involve a very fierce party struggle, perhaps underlined with the idea that it might inspire the ex-Kaiser with the hope that the men who threw him from power would not have it all their own way in the polling booths.

In all these journals, news referring to political circumstances in the Entente countries was marked in the margins, especially that discussing the forthcoming British general election. In several cases passages underscored in red ink were seen to refer to the British Labor Party's prospects and policy.

Altogether, therefore, this preliminary symposium of the world's news is a very illuminating indication of the lines on which the ex-Kaiser's mind is working. Even a hasty examination of the marked passages showed me that those whose duty it is to prepare the digests are keenly on the lookout for any sign of political dissension in England or America.

WANTS KAISER'S ACTS TRACED

LONDON, Dec. 9.— William Hohenzollern has been already sufficiently punished, but it is essential that his part in causing the war should be clearly established, says Philipp Scheidemann, the former German Secretary of Finance and the Colonies, in an interview with a representative of The Express. He also said that the establishment of a State tribunal to try all persons guilty of causing the war was now being discussed, but must be decided by the National Assembly.

Scheidemann, according to The Express, said further that Dr. W. S. Solf, the Foreign Minister, remained in the Government because it was believed that he had the confidence of Great Britain and America.

The eventual Government of Germany will be republican in form, "a United States of Germany," Herr Scheidemann predicted.

DRAMA

By John Corbin

Le Gendre De Monsieur Poirier.

By Emile Augier and Jules Sandeau. At the Theatre due Vieux Colombier.

M. Poirier.....Charles Dullin
Gaston.....Henri Dhurtal
Hector.....Jean Sarment
Verdelet.....Romain Bouquet
Valet.....Robert Bogaert
Chevassus.....Marcel Millet
Antoinette.....Yvonne Garrick
Un Domestique.....Robert Casa
Le Portier.....Lucien Weber

Have the French any equivalent of our epithet "Victorian"? If so, being so intelligently critical, they doubtless use it to describe the large, sane virtue of the mid-century as well as its somewhat tasteless sentimentalism. "Le Gendre de Monsieur Poirier," which the company at the French Theatre produced last night, is a comedy of serene wisdom and heartfelt humor, with just enough of the mid-century nimiety in goodness to lend it a quaint charm. More than this, it is a comedy conceived in the ripe tradition of Molière, with a full measure of the great master's insight in social satire, and his broadly laughing toleration of all but ignoble foibles. The production showed M. Copeau's company at its best, and afforded an evening of unalloyed delight.

The occasion was further notable for the début here of Yvonne Garrick, some time member of the Comédie Française, who played the tradesman's daughter, lately married to a Marquis. She is properly youthful and personable, and, while the character makes no great artistic demands, she plays it with much skill and a genuine feeling for its innate modesty, sensibility and dignity of heart. There is every prospect that she will prove a valuable acquisition to the company.

The Poirier of Charles Dullin develops the surface humors of the character somewhat at the expense of its basic strength; it has more overtones than undertones. But it is technically quite flawless, touching each facet of crotchet and foible with inerrant skill and infectious humor. Henri Dhurtal as the Marquis seemed rather heavy in moments of airy inconsequence, but played the emotional scene at the close with strength and deep feeling. The Verdelet of Romain Bouquet was altogether admirable. Robert Bogaert as the cook and Lucien Weber as the porter were irresistibly comic.

"9 O'CLOCK" REVUE OPENS.

Ziegfeld's Newest Is a Typical Girl-and-Music Show.

The New Amsterdam Theatre roof, long consecrated to midnight entertainment and that only, last night entered into active competition with the musical halls of the lower stratum by offering for the first time a 9 o'clock performance in addition to the later revue. Like the midnight performance, it is the product of Mr. Ziegfeld, and, indeed, differs from the other entertainment in no important detail save length. It is girl-and-music revue of the accepted variety—a bit more girl than music, if the truth be told.

Most of the first-night audience made a night of it, remaining from the start of the first performance—at 9:30 instead of 9—until the end of the second. The performing personnel included several who have long been prime favorites with the musical comedy fans—Bessie McCoy Davis, Lillian Lorraine, Fannie Brice—and accordingly a pleasant time was had by all. To the captious the first two hours may have seemed a trifle dull in comparison with some of the midnight harlequinades which the roof has known in the past, but that may quite possibly have been due to the fact that the entertainment was strictly of the midnight variety and calculated to appeal more effectively to senses already dulled by the passage of the hours.

The heroine of the first show was unquestionably Bessie McCoy Davis, who danced with something more than her accustomed grace and airiness. Fannie Brice, with two numbers, was as hilariously funny as usual, particularly in her burlesque of a vampire. Early in the evening Mr. Ziegfeld essayed a departure from the revue formula by offering a fantastic sketch in which Holbrook Blinn played the leading rôle, but the results cannot be commended. The audience, accustomed to its girls, rather rudely refused to pay any attention to the proceedings save when the coryphees were present.

The performance would lose nothing, and perhaps gain a little, by the toning down of the young woman called Bee Palmer. As for the rest, the chorus was costumed with a gorgeousness which outdid even the previous roof shows. Now and then it was a trifle less costumed than seemed expedient, for the performance is nothing if not frank in the nature of its appeal.

The specialists of the first show are Lillian Leitzel, performing with skill on a dangling rope; Hal Dixon, dancing and sliding on his shoulder blades, and Georgie Price, who has found a surname in the interval since his vaudeville days with Cuddles and Gus Edwards.

EDUCATING THE PUBLIC.

It is a long time since CARLYLE said concerning the extension of the British suffrage, "Now we must educate our masters." Mr. VAIL has the same idea in economics that CARLYLE had in politics. That is not strange, for in CARLYLE'S time politics was less a matter of economics than now, when there is little to politics but economics. Mr. VAIL approves Postmaster General BURLESON'S experimental object lesson in Government operation of the wire services as a means of educating the public, to whom arguments are being addressed for Government operation of almost everything. The purpose of the "education of the public" in this manner is "to create an actively favorable attitude toward some correlation or co-ordination of operation and service with the control and regulation and restriction, through some combination of governmental authority and private ownership or operation, retaining all the advantages and incentives of both." In other words, what is to be taught is the public benefits of reasonable combinations in restraint of trade. What Mr. VAIL proposes cannot be attained by Government ownership and operation. Government will not regulate and restrict Government monopoly, and the institution of monopoly is destructive of incentive, whether the monopoly is Government or private. Regulated private monopoly is the best economic combination known to man, with all its faults, which are more a matter of bad regulation than of wrong principle. There is more need to instruct Mr. BURLESON in this than Mr. VAIL, for no one has stated the arguments to that effect more cogently than Mr. VAIL.

It is odd that Mr. VAIL should be engaged in practicing under Government monopoly what was condemned when he was a private operator But the inconsistency is Government's, not Mr. VAIL'S. The wire services would have been co-ordinated under regulation long ago if Government had not prosecuted Mr. VAIL'S attempt to do it. What there is new about the proposal is not the Postmaster General's, and all that is good about it is Mr. VAIL'S. The best hope from the curious association of the leading proposer and opponent of Government operation is that the process of education will proceed under the able instruction of Mr. VAIL, who has learned in the hard school of experience what must be. Mr. BURLESON is one of those who hold that what they think ought to be can be attained by statute, regardless of the tyranny of the balance sheet. Mr. BURLESON knows how to abolish the balance sheet, with the help of appropriations. He can never teach Mr. VAIL that.

Perhaps Mr. VAIL will pardon a slight amendment of his proposal of education of the public, unless indeed he had in mind a different public from the one he seems to indicate. The users of the wire services have no need of education in the advantages of their reasonable combination. The combination of the telegraph and the telephone services was hailed with gratitude when it was a novelty. Only Government opposed it. That is the quarter where the education is needed, and not alone respecting the wire services. This has been called a nation of "economic illiterates," but the reproach attaches more to the courts and the lawmakers than to those whose solvency and profits depend upon sound economics. For over thirty years the statutes and judges have lent themselves to the war waged by the politicians against the promotion of trade by reasonable restraints of uneconomic practices. It cannot be said that business has gone on its way undisturbed, but the trusts which were to be killed by the law against them were pigmies and few compared with those now existing. Only last week the leading organization of national trade asked the abandonment of Government opposition to railway pools. As in the case of the wire services, Government is now practicing what it prosecuted when the railways did it, and is proposing to carry over into peace what it assumed to do under cover of war necessity. Also the Interstate Commerce Commission left upon the doorstep of Congress last week the problems which Congress had devolved upon the Commission. For thirty years the Commission has been suggesting laws and more laws, but not before the laws which now it proposes. Thirty years of education has been wasted upon Congress and the Commission, and now the problem stands where it stood in the beginning.

The failure of regulation opens before us the economic abyss of Government ownership and operation. Truly there is need of the education of our masters, but not so much of the electorate as of the makers and expounders of the laws. The rule of unreason in the regulation of economic trusts was originally declared in the case of the Transmissouri Freight Association, and was reaffirmed in the joint traffic case. Those decisions stand discredited by the discovery and declaration of the rule of reason. There are not a few who now think that the next step is to repeal the law forbidding unreasonable restraints of trade, and to allow Government to do what it forbade private operators to do as contrary to public interests. It is not possible to repeal the rule of reason without an economic revolution from which the Supreme Court recoiled, but which Congress is still sufficiently uneducated to be considering. It is not possible now to enact a rule of economic unreason, any more than it was possible to enforce such a law when it was thought that it had been enacted. The law on economic combinations now embodies the wisdom of a thousand years, the culmination of good merchant practice, the assertion of common law in Federal jurisdiction. The thing to do with it is to enforce it, and not to repeal or amend it. Least of all should the problem be given up in despair, and Government operation be adopted as an even more desperate remedy.

REACTION AT ALBANY.

It is difficult for all true political modernists, enacters of virtue and uplifters of taxation, to have patience with such a palaeological hunker as State Senator HENRY M. SAGE, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, when he utters heathenish heresy like this:

> The greatest task which the Legislature has this year is not the approval or disapproval of a Federal prohibition amendment, but it is a sound method of taxation and a careful retrenchment wherever possible in its constantly mounting expenditures.

Mr. SAGE has the misfortune to come from the region pervaded by that other friend of the antique and constitutional, Mr. WILLIAM BARNES; but surely he should have learned from Governor WHITMAN that the ratification of the Dry Amendment is the supreme question of all the ages. Moreover, that measure is economically sound, from a point of view of the political modernist, since it will increase taxation. Surely, if it pays to be good, a State made good by amendment ought to be willing to pay for its improvement. Appropriations for the State Government this fiscal year amount to only about half a million more than eighty-one million dollars.

Mr. SAGE says that the estimated financial resources of the State for next year will be twelve million less than this year. The various State departments and institutions have put in their modest little requests for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Mr. SAGE has taken the trouble to add them up. They amount to $96,858,064. So the accounts receivable will amount to twelve million less, the accounts payable to fifteen million more. What of it? The one thing needful is to pass the Federal amendment. Who is going to bother about taxation and retrenchment and "constantly mounting expenditures," provided the amendment is passed?

THE NAVAL PROBLEM.

In his annual report the Secretary of the Navy recommends that Congress authorize a three-year construction program like that approved on Aug. 29, 1916, which called for ten dreadnought battleships, six battle cruisers, ten scout cruisers, fifty destroyers, together with submarines, transports, hospital ships, and auxiliaries, in all 156 vessels. With the carrying out of the program of 1916 as planned the participation of the United States in the great war interfered. Mr. DANIELS does not tell the country in his report what progress has been made in building the battleships and battle cruisers authorized more than two years ago. The fact, of course, is that the work is backward. All the ships provided for by Congress at that time must be "under construction" by July 1, 1919. Mr. DANIELS thinks that a beginning upon every ship of the first three-year program will have been made within the time limit; "and it is expected," he says, "that during the ensuing fiscal year, which will begin July 1, 1919, shipbuilding facilities will be available for further work."

Construction work on the big ships of the first program, which has a year or more to run, had to be suspended in great part during the war because of the urgent demand for destroyers and submarine chasers; "the energy available for new construction was concentrated mainly upon vessels to deal with the submarine menace." As many as 355 wooden submarine chasers were built. As to destroyers, by the Summer of 1917 orders had been placed which not only absorbed all available capacity for more than a year, but required a material expansion of existing facilities." One hundred destroyers were laid down, and then it was decided "to undertake the construction of 150 more destroyers." By Oct. 1, 1918, the number of destroyers launched was 93. In the same time 29 submarines had been added to the navy. When the Secretary says that "the construction of capital ships and large vessels generally has been to some extent suspended," the impression he conveys is that work was practically stopped, except on big ships that were nearing completion when the United States entered the war; of course, none of these was a unit of the three-year program of Aug. 29, 1916. The execution of that program must extend a considerable period beyond the time originally set, and the delay would postpone the carrying out of a second three-year program.

In 1916 "an adequate first line of defense," to quote from the Secretary's report of that year, was the consummation aimed at by Congress. As national defense may still be of major importance after the signing of the peace treaty, it is the Secretary's duty to recommend naval expansion along the lines laid down two years ago. The United States will have a great mercantile marine, which would seem to call for a navy of proportionate strength. If there should issue from the Peace Conference at Versailles a workable plan for a League of Nations, with an international naval force as a necessary adjunct, the United States would be called upon to furnish a number of ships corresponding to her position as a sea power, which is now rated as second in the world. Secretary DANIELS in recommending another three-year program may have such a requisition in mind.

For Great Britain Mr. WINSTON CHURCHILL has declared that naval expansion will still be her policy; and a day or two ago a formidable list of capital ships added to her navy since August, 1914, was published in England. It may turn out, in spite of Mr. CHURCHILL'S positiveness, that there will be no occasion for Great Britain to go on building capital ships by tens and twenties. The Peace Conference may change all that, in which case American naval expansion on the scale proposed by Mr. DANIELS would no longer be seriously considered. The Secretary of the Navy in his report of 1918, as well as in that of 1916, has expressed the hope that competitive naval construction will soon cease. In the shadow of war in 1916 it was imperative to plan for a greater navy; no one knew when the United States might be drawn into the war, or how long it would last. "In the peace treaty," says Mr. DANIELS, in his report just issued, "there will undoubtedly be incorporated President WILSON'S proposal for a reduction of armament 'to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.'" It is a vague term, but it seems to point to the plan of a League of Nations. However that may be, no statesman anywhere desires naval competition for war purposes. The Peace Conference will shed light on the problem. For the present no one in authority in the United States, or in England, can take the responsibility of recommending that appropriations for naval construction shall cease.

AMERICAN DYES.

Development of our new dyestuffs industry has been encouraged by the Tariff Commission, and advice given to the manufacturers last week by Chairman TAUSSIG came from a friend. Some of them ask that the industry shall be defended against German competition by exclusion of foreign dyes, the regulation of imports by a license commission, or a large increase of tariff duties. They were told by Dr. TAUSSIG that these proposals were "radical beyond the limits to which measures must be confined which have a chance of enactment." The Commission has prepared and will send to Congress a bill revising the present classification of dyes and intermediate raw materials. Enactment of it would give the industry some additional defense. Can action upon such changes be taken without regard to partisan differences? Said Dr. TAUSSIG:

> Is it not possible that the dyestuffs industry can be treated by itself? Is there not some chance that it will be considered upon its merits, without regard to political complications, and that the question will be disposed of as a matter needing immediate attention?

He sees ground for hope that the case will be regarded by Congress as exceptional and unique, and that the desired legislation will not be affected by partisan controversy over a general tariff policy.

Our manufacturers of dyes should be guided by the Tariff Commission. They have built up a fine industry whose exports now exceed in value the imports from Germany before the war. Immediate action for defense is not needed. Germany may have no surplus of dyes next year for a foreign market. The high cost of raw materials and intermediates here is declining, and dye prices will naturally be reduced. In this downward movement there is the beginning of defense. And probably the Commission's bill revising tariff rates will be passed. If the dye makers are reasonable in their treatment of consumers, giving them the benefit of lower production cost, Congress will not permit the industry to be wrecked.

THE SONS OF SPARTACUS.

Friday had been a day of slaughter in Berlin. As far away as Zurich the counters of the slain make them 180. The Associated Press dispatch from Berlin says that in the great massacre "twelve or sixteen were killed, according to various reports." Those terrible gladiators, the Spartacides, are reveling in resolutions and machine guns. At sober old Mainz "many persons have been killed." At Rotterdam sanguinary tales of the doings of Berlin are current. Considering the feeble numbers of the Spartacides and the theatrical bombast of some of their leaders, there seems to be a curious desire, a sort of an agreement, to magnify their proceedings and to make Honest Michel shudder at a rather shadowy disorder. One can't help suspecting that agents provocateurs are doing an active business.

Whether or not these little clashes in Berlin and elsewhere were arranged beforehand, it must be difficult for anybody not a Spartacide to take seriously the cruel persecution of those highly amateur Bolsheviki at the hands of the "Kaiser Socialists." SCHEIDEMANN and EBERT have been "Kaiser Socialists" and may be still, but their faction is such a great majority of the Socialist Party that they do not need to make "martyrs" of the Liebknecht fanatics. What could be more absurd than this ineffectual declaimer LIEBKNECHT, his auditory encircled by machine guns on motor trucks, addressing a meeting from the base of a Hohenzollern statue? The original SPARTACUS, leader of the famous insurrection of Roman slaves, as we see him in history or legend makes a fine end. He kills his war horse. On foot, with all the skill and desperation of a veteran gladiator, he fights to the death. LIEBKNECHT is a man of declamations and parades. Surrounded by machine guns, he begs assorted sections of the Berlin populace to rise and mutiny, to organize themselves into Red Guards. The populace remains stolid. Performances in the Lenine-Trotzky manner are all right when played in Russia, directed by Germany for the benefit of Germany. At home that sort of thing will never do. Disorder in Germany cannot be spontaneous. The instinct of discipline and obedience is too strongly implanted in the German breast. One cannot have a real pleasure, even a guilty joy, in straying into the realm of "Forbidden." In the ragtag and bobtail of the Spartacides there must be some old jailbirds; yet a German burglar, for example, can hardly parade his calling with complete satisfaction if he lacks a permit from the police.

In spite of all these reports of violence it is probable that few people of intelligence in Germany are really afraid of Bolshevism. There are powerful if now designedly obscure influences, East-Elbian, military, bureaucratic, industrial, that desire that the German people shall not feel secure save under the rule of the masters whom they have long served. As for the honest burghers in Cologne who "thank GOD the English have come" to protect property and life against the anarchs and the small-fry thieves, why, these are the same bold townsmen who gloated over the heroic attacks of the German airplanes on London and were nearly scared to death when the allied bombing planes returned the compliment to the Rhine cities.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Praises of Others Are Best.

That Secretary DANIELS should be even more proud than are other Americans of the gallantry shown by the marines at Belleau Wood is at once understandable and commendable. Holding the position he does, the marines are "his boys" in a way that they are not, for instance, the boys of the Secretary of War, and, just as a heavy responsibility would have rested on him if anything done under his administration had accomplished the almost impossible result of diminishing the long-established efficiency of this famous corps, so he can take, honestly, some credit to himself for the more than remarkable demonstration they made in the great and terrible fight of their right to stand shoulder to shoulder with the best soldiers in the world.

But—well, it is not denying the truth of anything he said about the courage and devotion of the marines to express a feeling of regret that he did not show a little more restraint than he did in his praises. The same modesty that prevented the Secretary from vaunting his own part in the achievements of the American Navy as a whole—in having it magnificently ready for instant service in eager co-operation with the navies of Great Britain and France—that same modesty might have suggested to him that he could safely leave the laudations of our men to the French and British officers who had seen with their own eyes what those men could do and how they did it. In the performance of that task those officers, from highest to lowest, have been far from backward. Again and again they have exhausted the vocabulary of eulogium in describing the work of the American troops—not least often that of the marines—and in their enthusiasm they had left nothing new or more to say. The judgment of such critics was final and it was sufficient.

Americans Were Not Alone.

There would have been less occasion to regret Secretary DANIELS'S superfluous praises of the marines if his enthusiasm had not misled him into so wording them as to leave in the minds of critical readers the impression that he had forgotten how small was the number of our "soldiers and sailors, too," taking part in the turning back of the German tide, and that if they had been alone—had there not been far greater numbers of other men as brave as they to push the attack—the tide would not, and could not, have been turned, at least not then.

It would be grievous indeed if "alone in France" should come to have the too amusing connotation a like phrase gained in the course of our war with Spain. Our civilian officials should be as careful as are all our military men to avoid even the semblance of boasting. For that there is neither need nor excuse, and no fear that the prowess of the Americans will go unsung even though no American sings them. There is no doubt that we are all appreciative, and it behooves us all not to excite in cynic minds the suspicion that we are surprised that we did so well.

This Duty Falls on the Nation.

In reading the letter in which HENRY C. FRICK declined membership in a committee to erect in France a monument to the men from this city who fell there in their country's service, one vaguely glimpses the possibility that he did not express all the reasons he had for this action. The two reasons he did give, however, are sound and adequate.

The first of them was that for New York City to show in this particular way its regard and respect for its dead sons would impose upon innumerable other cities and towns in the United States and in other countries something like an obligation to do the same thing. The results would be a form of municipal rivalry not to be desired and the bringing on France of an embarrassment that would be not the less painful, because it would have to be endured in silence. Civic monuments, as everybody knows, are not always masterpieces of art or taste, and—well, France is a teacher, not a pupil, in both of those domains.

Of even more weight than this reason was the second presented by Mr. FRICK. He wrote that for him one of the consequences of the war, and not its least important, was the new or emphasized sense of national unity which it had given to our people all over the land. We did not send men to battle across the sea from towns or from States, but from a country that knows no dividing lines in patriotism. It was an American army that went abroad, and all the men in it fought for a single cause. Those who perished for that cause well deserve a lasting monument in the country where fate overtook them, but they deserve it as Americans, not as coming from this or that part of America.

Courtesy Is Not Humiliating.

Now that the mustering out of service is proceeding rapidly, some troublesome problems have arisen with respect to the men who, though still in uniform, are no longer soldiers. It is true, of course, that with an honorable discharge goes a restoration of all civilian privileges, and that those privileges, in localities not "dry," include that of buying intoxicants, but it would be lamentable indeed if evidences of excessive indulgence should be given by men who, so far as anybody can see or know without investigation nobody is likely to make, are still members of the force whose sobriety and generally excellent behavior has filled their countrymen with such well-founded pride. As long as a man wears the national uniform, the honor of that uniform, which is the honor of his country, remains in his keeping, and for him to forget that fact, if something less than a crime, is certainly something more than a misdemeanor.

It is reported, too, that some of these discharged soldiers are refusing to salute the officers they meet. Such a refusal on their part is a sorry manifestation of dignity misunderstood. Did those who now exercise this miserable "right" to be discourteous if they please salute their officers in the recent past only because the regulations required that manifestation of respect? If so, they were strangely ignorant of what the military salute really means. The salute is not a confession of inferiority; it is a manifestation of the essential equality that exists between all ranks from highest to lowest among men who in their various capacities have devoted their lives to a common cause. He is blind who cannot see that the salute is equally honorable to him who gives it and to him who returns it, and the thought of compulsion should not enter the mind of either.

BE HUMBLE, O AMERICA!

Be humble, O America! Let not
The idle boast, the weak vainglory, blot
The fair white page of our achievement. Let Us not in this triumphant hour forget
The years we, hesitating, held aloof,
While Nations trembled 'neath the cloven hoof.

Forget not Belgium! With unerring blow
She hurled her slender body 'gainst the foe,
And, bleeding, writhing, paid the awful toll,
To save a world and her immortal soul.

Forget not France! Unfaltering she came,
Unfurled her banner, crying Freedom's name.
For four long years she flashed her fiery sword,
And checked the onslaught of that barbarous horde.
Bare are the fields where sleep her hallowed dead,
But God has planted poppies 'on each bed.

Forget not Britain! With her little band
Of "Old Contemptibles" she took her stand,
And, fearless, faced an overwhelming foe,
Met thrust with thrust and blow with furious blow,
Till, spent with toil, yet heeding still the call,

Be humble, O America! Our dead
Lie proudly side by side with those who bled
That Liberty might live. Be it our pride
We came not quite too late, but turned the tide,
And led the way to Victory! Thank God
That in that bloody path we, too, have trod;
That in Gethsemane we, too, have stood;
That of that consecrated, crimson flood,
That spread beneath the shrapnel's blighting show'rs,
One splendid, brave, redeeming drop was ours.

VILDA SAUVAGE OWENS.

SAYS WORLD LEAGUE WILL BE ORGANIZED

Taft, Addressing Commercial Congress, Predicts Action at Versailles.

CALLED 'NEW NATIONALISM'

Extension of Present Conceptions, Says Straus—Clark on Our Foreign Trade.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 9.—A league of nations to enforce peace was strongly urged as one of America's aims at the Paris conference tonight by ex-President Taft before a great meeting of the delegates of the Southern Commercial Congress.

Other speakers were Oscar S. Straus of New York, Chairman of the Cooperating Committee of the congress; Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, and Edward Filene of Boston.

"My feelings about the League of Nations," said Mr. Taft, "is that the stars in their course are revolving to make it inevitable. There is much discussion by statesmen, who refer us to the time of Washington and who warn us of entangling alliances. But what are we in now? I am reminded of the Texan who, when our Philippine policy and our tendency toward expansion were criticised, declared 'We are done expanding.'

"We can't escape it. We went into this war because we were driven into it. And we had to be driven because of that very policy of avoiding entangling alliances.

"This league of nations to enforce peace dosen't claim any patent or trademark. We are glad to have everybody support it. We don't care what he thinks about other things, so long as he favors the league idea. But what we do object to is being held responsible for internationalism in the sense that that cult denies nationalism.

"You have got to have a league with force enough to say to all those small nations: 'You do not propose to let your start a conflagration that will destroy this peace that we have endured so infinitely much to bring about. I say to you that unless such a league emerges from the conference at Paris the whole thing is a failure. I don't think it is going to be a failure—that is why I say to the gentlemen at Washington: 'Better get on the band wagon.'"

The "New Nationalism."

Oscar S. Straus of New York, in an address on "The Problem of Enduring Peace," also discussed the proposed League of Nations.

"Whether half of the youth of Europe, together with the precious fraction of ours, shall have died in vain, or for a beneficent and lasting purpose, will depend upon the measure of wisdom with which our allies and we solve the difficult problem of peace," he said.

"It will be urged that, in order to bring about an association or league of free nations, we must have power to compel the adjustment of international differences by means other than war, nations must renounce nationalism for supernationalism. The plain answer is, they will not have to renounce, but enlarge, their conception of nationalism, so as to make it more nearly accord with the true grandeur of nations and with their responsibility to one another, so as to insure respect for reciprocal national rights, not, as heretofore, on a basis of the might of each, but of the might of all for the rights of all.

"This is the all-important problem that will confront the nations at the Peace Congress. This problem is regarded in three different aspects by as many groups of scholars, publicists, and statesmen, and their followers in the several nations.

"The first group let us call the Conservatists, who are always the backward-looking and believe what has failed of accomplishment in the past cannot be made effective in the future. They maintain that, instead of an 'enlightened internationalism, the nations must intensify their nationalism and build ever stronger their military and naval effectiveness, and be ever ready for attack and defense.

The Standpatters.

"The second group, for the lack of a better term, we may call the Standpatters, who, while recognizing the need and desirability of a higher standard of morals in international relationships, maintain that this cannot be attained by any international mechanism, that in the last analysis national necessity will override any and all international restraints, and that all treaties embodying such checks and restraints will be broken. Whether they realize it or not they array themselves on the side of Machiavelli, and as upholders of the barbaric doctrines preached and put forth by Treitschke and Bernhardi.

"The third group are the New Nationalists, who, fully mindful of the errors and shortcommgs of the past, are determined to profit by the extraordinary opportunities of the present and to build upon a firmer foundation a more enduring structure than has ever been erected to safeguard the future against national aggression and conquest. They maintain that the basis of co-operation made necessary to secure victory should be applied to the maintenance of peace.

"In America it will be said, as it has already been said, both in and out of Congress, that we have a traditional policy laid down by the Fathers, embodied in Washington's farewell address, regarding entangling alliances and the Monroe Doctrine. If we are to be a progressive nation we must not let our worship of the past harden into a fetish and chain us to the past. We must interpret the American policy under the new world conditions in which we live and which the world war has brought us face to face with, as the Fathers, wise in their day, would have shaped their policy in the light of present conditions.

"The Monroe policy provided that no European nation should be permitted to extend its authority over an American nation. The World League policy is an enlargement of the same doctrine—that no nation shall be permitted to extend its power over any other nation, but that every nation should be left free to determine its own policy.

"We broke with the traditional American policy when we sent our brave boys overseas and joined with the Allies to conquer the enemies of democracy. To unite with the same Allies and covenant with them to safeguard the fruits of victory for future generations is not any more a new departure, but a logical sequence and wise precaution."

Speaker Clark's Address.

America's future prosperity rests in large measure on the increase of its foreign trade, Speaker Champ Clark of the House of Representatives said in the annual address which he delivered.

"The one problem resulting from the war with which the Southern Commercial Congress is most concerned is what arrangement will be made touching the freedom of the seas," he said. "When but a handful, for the freedom of the seas we fought the most powerful nation on earth. Last year and this we fought the Central Powers for the freedom of the seas, for, after all is said and done, that is the chief reason why we participated in the war.

"We can depend on President Wilson to secure freedom of the seas at the Congress of Versailles. In that connection the principal question with which this commercial congress should wrestle is how to increase our foreign trade, for upon that rests in largest measure the future prosperity of this republic."

The immense merchant marine built up during the war should be maintained forever, Mr. Clark declared, and added that the only way to do it "is to modernize our navigation laws, make our seamen the most efficient, and above all things increase our foreign trade.

"We have no time to lose in preparation for the trade war which will come simultaneously with peace," Speaker Clark warned in concluding. "Great Britain and France have been busily and scientifically preparing for it, even within the sound of the roar of the great guns."

ALLIED WAR SALON OPENS.

American Galleries Exhibition Covers Whole Field of Operations.

The Allied War Salon which opened yesterday at the American Art Galleries, to continue until Dec. 24, is an exhibition of paintings, sculpture, prints, posters, and drawings, either directly or indirectly connected with the war, the net proceeds from the exhibition to go to the Art War Relief. The exhibition is held under the joint auspices of the Division of Pictorial Publicity, the Committee on Arts and Decoration of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, and the American Federation of Arts. The Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Italian Ambassador, and the Acting High Commissioner from Great Britain are among the patrons. Albert Eugene Gallatin is Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, and is responsible for the admirable catalogue. With this formal and official framework it was to be expected that the exhibition would show a corresponding formality. The contrary is true.

One of the principal features is a group of nearly two hundred drawings made by the official artists of the United States Army, just arrived from France, and now shown for the first time in New York. The artists have taken their responsibility in the characteristic American spirit, with no undue deference for its source in Government authority, but with a frank determination to do their best for their country with such talent as they possess. Much of this talent is of a high order, and the quiet, unobtrusive manner in which it is used is of the very essence of its quality. The names are familiar to the American public—George Harding, J. André Smith, W. J. Duncan, W. J. Aylward, Wallace Morgan, and Ernest Peixotto. Each of them now writes "Captain" before his name, but the style of the work has not changed at all. There is a characteristic absence of sentimentalism in all the records and freedom from insistence on any one feature of the scene at the expenses of others. The tired men at Château-Thierry are just tired men, not exhausted heroes, under Captain Harding's pencil. The French light tanks are making their way across a wide field with businesslike precision. It is reserved for the artists at home to draw the agony of Belgium and the sorrows of women and children.

The subjects cover practically the whole field of war, dressing stations, supply trains, bomb-proof billets, "chow," officers' mess, German prisoners, the hurry call to fight, and the roll-call afterward, artillery and machine guns, drawings showing the kind of ground over which our men fought, the type of village in which they were billeted, the cavalry school at Saumar, machine gun battalions at drill, and a hundred other scenes of activity, all of which give a clear impression of the great powers of organization at work behind them.

A very interesting section of the exhibition is given to paintings and drawings by the marine camoufleurs of the United States Shipping Board, Second District. Nearly all the examples have to do with what is called the "baffle" system of camouflage as distinguished from the concealing system. By this "baffle painting the outlines of the ship are distorted and the submarine watchers are misled as to its size, character, and course.

Among the paintings are many that have been shown in smaller exhibitions and also in the exhibition of the Avenue of the Allies, Mr. Gallatin having acted in the spirit of Whistler's crisp response when asked if certain pictures of his in an exhibition had not been seen before. "No," he said, "they have been shown, but they haven't been seen." Certainly Hassam and Reuterdahl, Lie, and Blashfield, Bellows, Hugh Ferris, Johansen, and Luks and Beal are seen to excellent advantage in the large lower gallery, which also contains a few pictures fresh from the easel, conspicuous among them Paul Dougherty's vigorous and brilliant painting of a shipyard.

The group of drawings of our soldiers in France by the French artist Lucien Jonas, arrived too late for inclusion in the catalogue, but should not be missed by the gallery visitor. The American type is clearly seen and rendered with the incisive, easy method of French illustration. Jonas is not a Steinlen or a Forain, both of whom are notably represented in the exhibition, but he has a witty style of his own and has found the Americans entertaining.

Italy is represented by etchings of airplanes by Gianni Caproni himself, etchings by J. C. Vandrous speak for the Czechoslovaks, and a large group of the Raemaekers' drawings for Holland.

England provides, however, the largest amount of pictorial material.

The set of British lithographs illustrating the efforts and ideals of Great Britain in the war is an interesting document not only of the war but of the modern art of England. Muirhead Bone, simple to the point of austerity; Frank Brangwyn, complex to the point of incoherence; William Rothenstein, self-conscious, but also individual, and clever in his gray buildings; Augustus John, laying aside his modernist cloak for this muscular occasion; Eric Kennington, A. S. Hartrick, and a number of others, all expressing the mannerly revolt of the British artist against the mannerly convention of preceding schools. In the very beautiful lithographs of Spencer Pryse, which are new in America, we see especially the idiosyncratic Anglo-Saxon genius, reducing nonconformity to a systematized individualism that finally loses its accent of protest in its passionate assertion of race. Pryse never has done work more dignified and lovely with classic line than in these latest lithographs.

The English posters show also the fruit of the recent effort in England to make the art before which the largest public passes worthy of its great opportunity. When our subway stations can show such poster lithographs as adorned the Underground in 1914 we shall have got far along in our task of bringing art to the public—a task infinitely more difficult than that of bringing the public to art.

The war, however, has done much for our poster art. Only a few of us will recall, through the swarming and oppressive sensations of the past four years, the utter discouragement of our first efforts in poster making. We were tawdry and cheap almost in proportion to the stimulus and importance of the occasion. We helplessly revealed the unpreparedness not of our art but of our organization of art activities for any such stirring emergency. Then the public helped us with its jeering apprehension of the failures on parade. There is genuine satisfaction in turning to the American section and finding such poster designs as those now familiar to our American public by Mr. Blashfield, Mr. Sterner, Lieutenant Reuterdahl, Mr. Penfield, Mr. Crisp, Mr. Treidler, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Everett, Mr. Babcock, Mr. Leyendecker, Mr. Paus, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Dougherty, and Mr. Cox. The original drawings by these artists are on view, and there are lithographs by others.

The care with which the selection has been made enables this American group to stand comparison very satisfactorily with the more deeply initiated foreign groups. There is a certain freshness and directness in the American appeal that expresses the youth and courage of the country as it has not often been expressed in its art.

MARSHALL LAUDS JAPAN.

Vice President Welcomes Prince Higashi-Fushimi at Capitol.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Vice President Marshall today received Prince Higashi-Fushimi of Japan and his suite at the Capitol. The party, accompanied by Acting Secretary Polk of the State Department, was welcomed in the offices of the Vice President and then was shown through the Capitol.

In addressing the Prince and his party, Mr. Marshall said:

"We appreciate the distinguished courtesy which the Imperial Government of Japan has shown to us by this visit. In welcoming you we acknowledge that splendid part which you took in the winning of the war for civilization.

"You may think this a strange statement, but it expresses my view—that civilization does not depend upon race, religion, or culture, but rather upon that thoughtful consideration which every man and every nation ought to have for the rights of every other man and every other nation. You will realize, therefore, in contemplating your great services in the fight which with us you have been making for civilization, how deeply grateful the American people are for the fine attitude of mind disclosed by your Government in the perilous times through which he have so recently passed."

SEES AID TO PEACE IN MONROE DOCTRINE

EUROPE'S PROBLEMS OURS

Ex-Senator Declares Constitution Will Sustain Country's New Role as World Power.

Ex-United States Senator George Sutherland of Utah delivered at Columbia University last evening the first of eight lectures on "Constitutional Power and World Affairs." President Nicholas Murray Butler, who introduced Mr. Sutherland as a former President of the American Bar Association, said, after the lecture, that he would in the course of his series of talks enunciate "an entirely new theory of the Constitution," the theory that, now that the United States has become a world power, the Constitution should be strictly interpreted at home, but most broadly interpreted in connection with world politics and policies.

In opening his address, Senator Sutherland said it would have been black treason for the United States to have kept out of the war. He also spoke of the German violation of Belgium and of Luxemburg "as contemptible and cowardly as the assault of a powerful bully upon a defenseless child."

Senator Sutherland, approaching the discussion of the Constitution, said that it had become the fashion in some circles to denounce the written Constitution as undemocratic, as an unwarranted restraint upon the people to move forward.

"But in truth," he continued, "it is the most democratic thing we possess, for it is the one thing above all others that makes articulate and clear the claim that all power comes from the people. It is the one thing that makes the Government which it establishes a servant of the people and prevents it from becoming their master.

"Out of the Spanish-American war we emerged a broadened empire with overseas possessions and a flag carried half around the world. But we did not perceive that this entailed world responsibilities, which, with the coming of the occasion, we would be compelled to assume. That occasion has now come and these responsibilities we are beginning to face.

"It is no longer true, if it ever was true, that European international problems are no concern of ours. For the next few years at the very least they will constitute our chief concern, and they will never hereafter cease to demand our careful consideration and solicitude.

"We are seeking for ourselves none of the usual fruits of conquest—neither territory nor indemnity, nor the vast military expenses we have incurred, but there are things of great importance for which we may justly ask. For one thing, we should seek and obtain in this general world accounting the formal recognition and adoption of the Monroe Doctrine. That would be little to ask of our allies and little to exact from our enemies, and it might hereafter prove of incalculabe value to us.

"Important as this doctrine is, however, it has thus far rested upon nothing more substantial than our own assertions. The present situation presents an opportunity, which may never come again, to obtain for it the force of international sanction. The adoption and recognition of the Monroe Doctrine should be one of the questions placed before the Peace Conference."

PLEASED AT 'BRITAIN'S DAY.'

London Press Cordially Appreciative of American Tribute.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Cordial appreciation of the honor conferred by the United States by celebrating Britain Day is expressed by newspapers here.

"A new page in Anglo-American history is being turned," says The Telegraph. "We and the Americans have discovered we have many ideals in common. It may be there never will be an Anglo-American alliance, but it will be a great achievement if any troubles ahead of the two nations in the course of their economic development are confronted in a spirit of good comradeship such as has marked our co-operation in wartimes.

"The people of the United States are paying a tribute of admiration to the people of the British Commonwealth, and no tribute could be half so grateful to us, for we feel we can repay it from our hearts. Manifold have been the ties between the two peoples, but such celebrations would have been impossible until now. Here and in America it is shown that, notwithstanding many differences in unessentials, the agreement is profound upon all that matters most."

The Times dwells on the necessity for co-operation in future and concludes its comment by giving warning against German propaganda.

AMERICAN FORCE IS DUE IN COBLENZ

German Authorities Expected Our Troops to Enter Rhine City Yesterday.

TREVES CALM AND JOYOUS

AMSTERDAM, Sunday, Dec. 8.—The American forces, advancing toward the Rhine, will reach Coblenz on Monday, according to a message from Berlin, quoting a representative of the German Foreign Office who has just returned from Treves.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

TREVES, Dec. 8.—"Lest we forget." Here is Treves, there is Soissons. Here in Treves the lights are burning brightly tonight. Over across the street from this pretty Porta Nigra Hotel a musical comedy has just ended, and out of the Stadt Theatre well-dressed crowds fill the sidewalks, some on the way to their homes, some to the cafés, and restaurants, and dances. Street car bells are clanging, and boys are selling papers, and up from the throngs comes the sound of laughter. Waiters in evening clothes are waiting in the restaurants to serve Treves merrymakers. This is Treves, the well-kept and prosperous metropolis of this sector of the Moselle Valley.

Seated here in a flower garden of Hunland, my memory goes back to another metropolis, Soissons, the metropolis of its part of the Aisne Valley. There are no arclights in Soissons tonight. No merry crowds are coming from the city's theatres. The lights of no restaurants shine across the well-parked streets. No waiters in evening clothes stand with the proffered wine list.

Desolation in Soissons.

There is desolation in Soissons. I can see standing stark the two maimed spires of its once noble cathedral. I can see its torn and tortured houses, once the beautiful homes of beautiful Northern France, now the habitat of scavenger rats, if they haven't all died of hunger. The clang of the street car bells is gone, and of laughter there is none. The war's curse has ruined the once fair city.

That is Soissons. This is Treves. That is France. This is Germany.

I can hear some weakminded brother say that the people of Treves were not to blame for what happened to Soissons. I say that neither were the people of Soissons. To one who has seen much of the ruin the Hun carried into France, there is something repugnant, something unspeakably arrogant, and, withal, disgusting, in the prosperity and well-being of Treves. And people coming in from other German towns tell me it is much the same in many other places.

Untouched by the ravages of war, these German cities stand intact, their ordered life going on in measured circles. The German soldier, demobilized, comes back to a home, a roof above his head. His wife and children welcome him to the fireside he left when he started amuck in August, 1914.

And what of the French soldier who left his home in Soissons to defend his own from the Hun? The poilu goes back, but there is no home. Its roof is crumbled slate and its walls are piles of stone. His wife and children, if alive, are far away; and I can see him, as I have seen others, gaze upon the spot with feelings no words can portray. And perhaps the Hun who helped to do it went to the theatre to see the musical comedy in Treves tonight.

LOYALTY TO FRANCE IN ALSACE-LORRAINE

Lord Burnham Finds Natives, Torn From Republic in 1871, Eager to Rejoin It.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—There naturally has been some concern in connection with the reincorporating of Alsace-Lorraine into France, as the population has become largely German since 1871.

Recent reports from there have been reassuring on this point. Lord Burnham of The London Telegraph, who has been spending ten days in Alsace-Lorraine, told me this morning that the situation there was most excellent. There was universal satisfaction among the population at joining France, and nowhere did he see a single sign of sullenness or discontent.

LAUDER SINGS LOVE SONGS.

"Don't let us sing any more about war; just let us sing of love," was the theme of Harry Lauder's performance last night on his reappearance in New York at the Lexington Theatre. He sang to a packed house of enthusiastic and demonstrative admirers, among whom was a contingent of one hundred wounded American soldiers. Resplendent in his kilties, he sang the love of the young man in "Back, Back to Where the Heather Grows." Togged out as one of his Majesty's seamen, "who do not mix with the officers," he sang the fickle sailor's love in "There Is Somebody Waiting for Me," and finally, with a heavy, shambling gait, with a crick in his back, and with the beloved aged pipe, he sang the reminiscent love of the old man, the love of "When I Was Twenty-one."

With the same infectious, ivory-studded chuckle, and the captivating lilt, he carried his audience with him in his new songs as of old. Yet they called for the old songs, and he responded with "I Love a Lassie." And then, when the demands became insistent, he said he did not know whether he would be equal to singing "Wee Hoose 'Mang the Heather," (not giving the well-known reason, that it was the favorite of his only son, who was killed in the war,) but he was equal to it, and sang it unaccompanied. It was the first the soldiers called for when he went to France in September, and it is said that he sang it only with tears in his eyes and in his throat.

When he was surrounded with floral pieces, which were sent to the stage, he become reminiscent, and told how the two days following the signing of the armistic were the saddest days of his life. And yet, he said, now that the war was over, "don't let us sing any more about the war, just let us sing of love," and he sang the "Victory Song," of which those words are the refrain. He did talk of war, and, in a different key from that of his love songs, called for the sternest kind of justice for the Germans, appealing to Americans not to become soft and sentimental now that the war was over.

He told of the £70,000 in the Harry Lauder Fund, a fund which he had raised to help those soldiers who had returned from the war unable to follow their old professions, and who needed a little start to become self-dependent. To swell the fund he offered to the audience a copy of his own book, "A Minstrel in France," in which he had written a New Year greeting. He so'd it for $250.

Bert Melrose, in his mirth-provoking, awkward oddities, easily led the remainder of the bill. The Nassues, in striking groups of living animal statuary; Julia Curtis, in songs and impersonations, and the Children of Confucius, who danced gracefully and sang amateurishly, completed the program.

BASEBALL TRIBUNAL BANKRUPT AFTER PAYING EXPENSES OF FEDERAL LEAGUE WAR

REPORT COMMISSION REDUCED TO PAUPER

Once Huge War Fund Consumed by Payments to Federal League.

OFFICIALS' SALARIES CUT

Forced Retrenchment May Preclude Promised Changes in Baseball Tribunal.

It is expected that on account of the strict economical policy which is to be followed in baseball during the coming season, the changes which have been threatened in the National Commission will not be attempted for at least another season. The financial settlement of the Federal League war has consumed all the money which the commission had been saving out of the world's series for the last dozen years.

The payments for Harrison Park in Newark, Washington Park in Brooklyn, and Exposition Park in Pittsburgh, together with, the settlement of several other obligations, has made the National Commission's money chest just as empty as Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard. It is generally understood among baseball men that the commission is "broke."

It is stated that for some time Chairman August Herrmann has been receiving only half of his regular salary as head of the commission. Secretary John E. Bruce's salary has also been slashed, and the expenses of the officials, which at one time used to soar 'way up into the thousands, have been cut to little or nothing. These are hard times in baseball, and the league is not at this time going to appoint new officials who will have to be paid large salaries.

On account of the unsettled conditions in baseball, Chairman Herrmann and other officials were willing to have their salaries cut in half, but if new men were brought in to fill their places full salaries would be needed to attract the right type of executives. It is going to be more than one season before baseball catches up with the losses it sustained during the Federal League war.

While some of the clubowners of the National League are still plotting to oust Herrmann as Chairman, it is difficult to see just how it is going to be accomplished. The man who is elected President of the National League may or may not be instructed to vote for some other man for Chairman, but the Cincinnati man has a stanch supporter in Ban Johnson of the American League, and as the Chairman is appointed by the Presidents of the two major leagues, the matter would result in a deadlock.

While John A. Heydler is not seeking the office of President of the National League, it is likely that he will be asked to serve by the club owners. There is no other man so fitted for the position as Heydler who can fill the three positions alone—President, Secretary, and Treasurer. This would be along the line of the economical policy which the baseball people expect to pursue until they have made up the losses of the Federal League settlement.

James E. Gaffney, former owner of the Boston Club, consulted with several of the National League club owners yesterday. Mr. Gaffney stated that the stockholders of the Boston Club had met all their obligations and had settled with him last week. This probably means that the club will not be put up for sale, but will be operated next season by the same corporation. George Stallings will again be manager, as his contract will not expire for two years. As the financial difficulties of the St. Louis Club have also been adjusted, no change in the National League's makeup will be considered at today's meeting.

The club owners will convene at the Waldorf-Astoria at noon today, when the Board of Directors will hold its annual meeting. As there is considerable routine work to be taken care of, it is not likely that the league will get to the task of electing a new President before tomorrow.

That a policy of retrenchment will be adopted by the National League is almost certain and a cut in the player limit to eighteen men and a shortening of the schedule is approved by a majority of the club owners. As the American League has refused to meet with the National League to adopt some uniform policy on the player limit and schedule, the National League will go ahead and follow its own policy regardless of what the American League will do in Chicago Thursday.

ORIOLES MAY WITHDRAW.

Dunn Threatens to Quit International Unless Draft Rule Is Lifted.

Jack Dunn of Baltimore disturbed the harmony of the meeting of the new International League at the Hotel Imperial yesterday by announcing that he would withdraw his club from baseball if the major leagues did not lift the draft from the Class AA leagues. Each season the major leagues have the right to draft the best players of all the minor leagues. For many years Dunn and others have fought to have this draft privilege eliminated, but the majors have always refused the request.

Joseph J. Lannin, the former owner of the Boston Red Sox, who has interest in the Newark, Buffalo and Hamilton, Ont., clubs in the new circuit, announced yesterday that he would continue in the game for another season at least. He had announced his intention of retiring. It is stated that Providence is anxious to get back in the International again and may take the Hamilton, Ont., franchise, which for the greater part of last season was in Syracuse. With Mr. Lannin in the fold, the future of the league looks much brighter.

The Class AA leagues, the International, the American Association and the Pacific Coast League, will probably adopt a uniform salary limit. The American Association has already suggested a limit of $3,000 a month, and President John H. Farrell will soon confer with the officials of the other two leagues before adopting this limit.

President Farrell in his annual report, which he read to the club owners yesterday, recommended the $3,000 limit, and also suggested a plan to pool all the receipts and disbursements and pay all out of the common fund. Then what was left would be divided among the clubs. This plan has been suggested by baseball leaders before and has even been tried, but as some cities draw much better than others there is always danger of dissatisfaction over the distribution.

Those present at the meeting were President John H. Farrell, James J. McCaffery, Toronto; Joseph J. Lannin, Buffalo; Charles T. Chapin, Rochester; Jack J. Dunn, Baltimore; David Driscoll, Jersey City; Thomas McCarthy, Newark, and Pat J. Donovan, Hamilton. Mr. Farrell held the proxy of the Binghamton Club.

YANKEES BUY SCHNEIDER.

Former Cincinnati Pitcher Will Toil for Huggins Next Year.

The Yankees have put through the first baseball deal of the season. Secretary Harry Sparrow announced yesterday that Pete Schneider, the Cincinnati pitcher, had been purchased, and would do duty under Manager Huggins next season. Schneider played with Seattle and Medicine Hat before he went to Cincinnati. Schneider's best season was in 1917, when he ranked fourth among the National League pitchers.

There were a number of American League officials in conference here yesterday before starting to the meeting in Chicago. Manager Connie Mack was here from Philadelphia, and had a talk with Harry H. Frazee and Manager Ed Barrow of the Red Sox, and President Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees. It is expected that there will be a clash between Frazee and Johnson in Chicago Thursday, but Frazee did not seem to be worrying about it yesterday.

YALE ATHLETE BIDS FOR SQUASH HONORS

E. J. Clapp, one of Yale's best hurdlers a few years ago, yesterday made a bid for recognition at squash tennis by advancing to the semi-final round of the national open handicap squash tennis championship at the Columbia University Club. Playing from the Yale Club, Clapp met and disposed of F. B. Geddes of the Squash Club at 15—12, 15—13, in a match where the result was in doubt until the final smash by Clapp.

Clapp enjoyed a handicap of plus two aces as compared to the limit of seven aces and one hand for Geddes. It was a contest of speed at all times, and it was the endurance of Clapp which finally wore down Geddes and brought the verdict to the Yale Club man. In the first game Geddes drove the ball continually, and managed to keep Clapp on the run, but toward the end the Yale Club man placed his shots with telling effects and had Geddes guessing on round the court smashes.

John W. Appel, Jr., of the Harvard Club, one of the low handicap men of the tournament, continued successful in a second round match by defeating E. W. Putnam, a veteran of the Columbia University Club, at 15—9, 15—8. Although Putnam long has been a Class A player of the Columbia team he was hardly a match for Appel, whose severe game frequently left Putnam bewildered and out of position. Appel never left the issue in doubt. He kept the ball flying around the walls almost from the outset and played to Putnam's backhand often enough to leave the Columbia man helpless.

The second round of the tournament was completed with two Princeton Club men victorious. In one match A. J. Mittendorf, handicapped at plus two aces, defeated J. W. Lee of the Harvard Club, who had a handicap of five aces, by 15—13, 15—12, and Ralph Monks of the Princeton Club defeated E. G. Swigert of the Harvard Club at 17—14, 15—12. Swigert, who comes from Portland, Ore., and has helped to introduce the indoor sport in the Pacific Coast City, made a desperate attempt to keep Monks from victory, but the Princeton Club man managed to gain the verdict after a close first game which was in doubt always.

The summaries:

National Open Handicap Squash Tennis Championship.—Second Round—J. W. Appel, Jr., Harvard Club, (minus 10 aces,) defeated E. W. Putnam, Columbia Club, (minus 5 aces,) 15—9, 15—8; A. J. Mittendorf, Princeton Club, (plus 2,) defeated J. W. Lee, Harvard Club, (plus 5,) 15—13, 15—12; Ralph Monks, Princeton Club, (plus 2,) defeated E. G. Swigert, Harvard Club, (plus 2,) 17—14, 15—12.

Third Round—E. J. Clapp, Yale Club, (plus 2,) defeated F. B. Geddes, Squash Club, (plus 7 and one hand,) 15-12, 15-13.

Minors Have New Plan.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—The National Commission will become the sole administrative power of baseball, settling the disputes of major and minor leagues alike, if a program agreed on at a conference today between President Ban Johnson of the American League and A. R. Tearney, President of the Three "I" League, be carried out. A joint meeting of committees from the American and the National Leagues and the minor leagues probably will be held in Chicago in January to take action on the proposal.

SIX-DAY CYCLISTS PAID.

Promoters Have Tidy Sum After Expenses Are Met.

The last detail of the 1918 six-day bicycle race will be cleared up today when Jake Magin and Reggie McNamara, the winners, will be paid their share of the purse. John M. Chapman, manager of the Cycle Racing Association, who had charge of the riders and officials throughout the grind, declared yesterday that he had distributed $20,528 among riders and officials. Of this $3,000 went to Magin and McNamara, $2,000 to Frank Corry and Eddie Madden, who finished second; $1,600 to Al Grenda and Fred Hill, who finished third; $1,200 to Hanley and Lawrence, who finished fourth, and $1,000 to Kopsky and Coburn, who finished fifth. All of the fifteen teams which started were included in the prizes.

The race was a huge success from every standpoint, except that of mileage covered by the riders. The promoters reaped reward; the crowds were bigger, comparatively, than those which have witnessed previous grinds, and there was an absolute absence of any serious injury.

The gross receipts, according to Chapman, amounted to $81,943. Chapman estimated that the total expenses of the race would be near $50,000, leaving the promoters $12,000, or slightly more, as profit.

The riders showed no ill effects of their hard week. All seemed eager for the race which is to be held in Paris some time in February. A number of the cyclists, Chapman stated, have asked him to accompany them on the trip to France.

COLUMBIA COACH HURT.

Practice of Wrestling Squad May Be Held Up Ten Days.

Wrestling practice at Columbia is likely to be seriously retarded for ten days or more because of injury yesterday to Gus Peterson, coach of the squad. While instructing one of the recruits in the sport, Peterson fell and wrenched his knee severely.

Peterson had planned to organise a team for intercollegiate and probably Amateur Athletic Union championships late in the Winter. He has drawn heavily on football material for his wrestling squad. Fargo, centre of the eleven throughout most of the season; Canapery, and several others have already reported.

Matches will be held with various college teams, including Yale, Princeton, and Pennsylvania, and if the intercollegiate tournament is held in the Spring, Columbia will enter a team in that also.

Wilmerding Beats Rose.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 9.—The St. Thomas tennis tournament opened at Pinehurst today with the playing of the first round and the semi-finals of the men's singles. Lucius Wilmerding, Jr., of Tuxedo produced the only surprise of the day when he defeated N. A. Rose of Longwood in the semi-finals, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3. Wilmerding will be opposed in the final by C. F. Watson, Jr., of the Westchester Country Club, who came through by defeating in turn, Frank H. Godfrey of Longwood and R. R. Spring of the Talbot C. C.

Muldaur Defeats McGowan.

In the class C billiard tournament at the Morningside Academy last night Muldaur defeated McGowan by a score of 250 to 219. The victor had a high run of 26 and an average of 6—4—41. McGowan's high run was 25 and his average 5—14—41.

Schoville Wins Tourney.

Frank Schoville defeated Paul Miller last night at the Cranfield Billiard Academy in the final for the Washington Heights three-cushion championship by a score of 35 to 13 in thirty innings. Schoville's high runs were 8—5—6. Miller's highest was 2.

HOPE TO ORGANIZE AMATEUR CUEISTS

A nation-wide campaign for enlargement which will put the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players on a plane with other governing bodies of amateur sports throughout the country was disclosed last night at the annual meeting of the N. A. A. B. P. Executive Committee at the Amateur Billiard Club. This campaign will be pushed until all sections of the country have been organized. The large number of officials who attended the meeting were enthusiastic over the project and were as one in pledging their utmost efforts to the success of the campaign. George B. Dryden of the Chicago A. A., President of the N. A. A. B. P., presided.

Already two districts have been organised under the control of the national body. They are the New England Association and the Western Association. The other sections of the country have been apportioned as follows: Middle States Association, Middle Atlantic Association, Tri-State Association, Southern Association, Northwestern Association, Southwestern Association, Inter-Mountain Association, Pacific Northwestern Association, and Pacific Association.

A step toward stimulating interest in the sport through the medium of increased allied membership was taken when the committee voted to make the fee for allied members $10. This question caused considerable discussion, some of the committee being in favor of a sliding scale, while others were for a fee of $25. The lower fee was adopted, however, unanimously. The association's returns for the united war work campaign were announced as $9,000, exclusive of the money subscribed through the Western Association. This sum will not be known for a few days, as the report is now in preparation.

A national three-cushion championship will be undertaken this year for the first time in the history of the organization. The date has yet to be selected, but preliminary work has already been started. Home tournaments will be held in the various cities, and the survivors will be brought to New York for the final play. This custom will be followed in the other national title tournaments, it is planned, making them the most representative ever held.

The Class A balkline championship will be held at the Chicago A. A. about Feb. 27, the Class B at Brooklyn about Feb. 1, and the Class C in Brooklyn beginning Jan. 6. The pocket billiard tournament will be held in the New York A. C. late in March.

No election of officers was held because the only ticket submitted was found to be irregular. The election will take place March 31 at a special meeting. The annual meeting of the Executive Committee, it was decided, will in future be held in March. This will permit of the reading of reports on the outcome of the season.

FOWNES LEADS GOLFERS.

Pittsburgh Player Has Low Score Over Pinehurst Links.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 9.—The Tin Whistles, divided in two handicap classes, took part in a 14-hole medal play contest at Pinehurst today, the best and the worst hole in each 9 being dropped into the discard. The first prize among the Class A players went to C. B. Fownes of the Oakmont Club, who also carried off the low gross honors. Fownes went over the championship course in 37—42—79 and played the 14 holes in a net 55, with the aid of an 8 handicap.

William M. Hager of Roselle, N. J., and J. D. C. Rumsey of Brooklyn tied for the Class B prize, both finishing with a net 59.

GOLFERS TO MEET TODAY.

There is going to be an old-time representation at the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association, to be held today. A. H. Pogson, the Secretary, has already received names of delegates from more than thirty clubs, and he expects this number to be considerably increased before the meeting is called to order.

A four-ball professional match is slated for the links of the St. Albans Golf Club today. Charles Mothersell of White Sulphur Springs and Carl Anderson of Bronxville will probably take on Will Entwistle of Syracuse and Jack Clark of the home club. Clark invited Entwistle to St. Albans several days ago.

A combination golf and trap-shooting at the Oak Ridge Golf Club has been finally won by Britton Bush of Oyster Bay. After two ties, Bush settled all doubts on Sunday by breaking 98 out of the possible 100 targets. His golf part of the performance was also creditable, as he made the round in 89 strokes.

COLLEGES READY FOR BASKET BALL SEASON

League Decides Not to Award Championship This Year.

Intercollegiate basket ball will be revived this season, but there will be no championship series and no title will be awarded by the Intercollegiate League, according to an announcement made yesterday by Ralph Morgan, Secretary of the league. The schedule of games to be played by teams which are members of the league will begin probably in the middle of January and will run through the middle of March, about a month shorter than the usual championship season.

Princeton, Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Yale will have teams as in the past, but there is doubt whether Cornell will have any team and whether Dartmouth will be able to organize a five to play a schedule of out-of-town games. Because of the uncertainty existing as to the game at Cornell and Dartmouth and the fact that several of the colleges have sent virtually all their basket ball players into the service, the league decided that it would be extremely unfair to award a championship this season. Four teams, Yale, Columbia, Cornell, and Pennsylvania each have two legs on the Heppe trophy, which stands for the intercollegiate championship.

The schedule will provide six league games for each team. The first game will be played on Saturday, Jan. 11, by which time all the colleges will have begun their academic work, and the final contest will take place on March 15.

Dartmouth may have a team, but it is understood that the Green will not take any extensive trips because of Faculty objections.

At Cornell the situation has been thrown into confusion by a pronouncement of Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, President of the university, against intercollegiate athletics and the probable effect this may have upon sports this year.

In order to prevent confusion in league games the association adopted a resolution providing for the uniforms to be worn in all contests. It was ruled that the home team shall wear a uniform with a white jersey, while the visiting five shall wear a uniform whose jersey shall be the solid color or combination of colors of the college represented. It appears that the Princeton-Pennsylvania games last Winter developed several warm debates because neither players nor officials could distinguish between the two uniforms in the stress of battle.

JUDGE GARY URGES LOWER STEEL RATES

Tells Manufacturers Cut Will Be Recommended to War Industries Board Tomorrow.

AGAINST WAGE REDUCTION

Until Cost of Living Goes Down the Workingman, He Says, Must Get Adequate Pay.

Judge E. H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation and President of the American Iron and Steel Institute, announced yesterday at a meeting of 140 leading steel manufacturers of the country that the General Committee of the Institute had decided to recommend to the War Industries Board, at a conference to be held in Washington tomorrow, that a "moderate" reduction be made in the scale of maximum prices for iron and steel products, commencing Jan. 1, 1919. Yesterday's meeting, which was held at the Waldorf-Astoria, was the first general conference of all interests to take up consideration of post-war problems, and to forecast the future of the industry under probable peace conditions.

Judge Gary outlined his views as to the steps that should be taken to demobilize the steel industry. The assembled producers were reminded that their trade was generally regarded as the "barometer of industry," and that as a consequence it behooved them to proceed in a conservative manner. Judge Gary was liberally applauded when he said:

"I predict the next five years in this country will be the most progressive, prosperous, and successful of our history. The results will astonish even the most optimistic of today. We need to be conservative, thoughtful, persistent, fair minded, and wise up to the limit of our understanding."

The Chairman described the post-war situation as of "paramount" importance. "Our employes must continue to be treated liberally with respect to their compensation and general welfare," he said.

"I am assuming you will not favor reductions in the wage rates," he continued, "unless and until they shall become absolutely necessary, notwithstanding it is possible the War Industries Board may decide there ought to be conservative reductions in the prices of iron, steel, coke, and ahead of us are going to surprise and perhaps disappoint some of you, and no doubt you will have justification on account of your own business situations, but I beg of you do not hastily reach a final conclusion in regard to the suggestion that is to be made.

"After a painstaking and exhaustive consideration and discussion, covering the larger part of two days, the General Committee, or at least a majority of its members, representing many of them, have reached the conclusion that there should be a moderate reduction in the scale of maximum prices for our commodities, the reductions and adjustments to be made on an equitable basis, in consideration of all of the circumstances and after careful study. If all present would agree to reductions and are prepared to systematically make a new schedule, it should be done at this meeting, but I think that all interests would be subserved if these matters, as heretofore, are referred with power by this meeting to the General Committee for submission and consultation with the War Industries Board."

The meeting was executive and no inkling was given at its end whether any considerable number of the steel men opposed the reduction plan. Judge Gary told reporters that the meeting had authorized the General Committee to act for the industry. In discussing the question of labor in the readjustment period, Judge Gary said in his speech:

"During the war the wage rates have been increased materially and frequently. They are now much higher than ever before. I believe we have not been paying more than was proper and just. The necessary costs of living have been growing and unless, and until, they are reduced, it would seem that, on the average, the present wages are reasonable. It is urged that on the basis of the present wages, employers cannot afford to make reductions in prices, while many insist they are entitled to higher rates, that there are to be reductions, they must be gradual and considered in individual cases. We must commence at some point or place.

"Judging from the past all of us believe we should not commence to make reductions in the present wage rates. Sacrifices must previously be made by employers, and our employes must continue to be treated liberally with respect to their compensation and general welfare. We will continue to show to them that it is our intention to consider their merits, and to treat them as associates and valuable assistants in our work. We should give no cause for reasonable complaint or unfavorable criticism.

Charles M. Schwab, Chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, who resigned last week as head of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, was not present at yesterday's meeting. The Bethlehem concern was, however, represented by Eugene Grace, its President. Among other prominent steel executives attending were E. A. S. Clarke, President Lackawanna Steel Company; John A. Topping, President Republic Steel and Iron Company; James A. Farrell, President United States Steel Corporation, and Harry G. Dalton, President Pickands, Mather & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

TAFT WOULD SHOOT DOWN BOLSHEVISM

Only Way, He Says, to Rid Russia of Murderers and Cut-throats' Rule.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 9.—Addressing the opening session of the annual convention of the National Investment Bankers' Association at the Hotel Traymore today, ex-President William Howard Taft said that the only way to get rid of the doctrine of Bolshevism was by "shooting it out of Russia." Mr. Taft's theme was "Clinching the Purposes of the War," and incidentally he praised the League of Nations proposal and laid down four points to be considered by an international body of this kind.

First, there must be, he said, an international court to define the rights of the new nations which there were now fourteen, "intoxicated with the idea of liberty, that to them means license."

Second, there must be a conciliation commission to deal with non-justiciable questions.

Third, there must be an international police force. "You can't overcome lawless violence except with lawful violence," said Mr. Taft, adding that the powers composing the League of Nations must keep the peace of the world.

Fourth, there must be, according to the former President, a congress of international law.

Mr. Taft, referring to Turkey, spoke of the plan of internationalizing the administration at Constantinople. He favored an independent Government in Palestine. He also advocated an international police force "that shall establish a tribunal to interpret the treaty."

John E. Oldham, of Boston, reporting for the Railroad Securities Committee, said that the pre-war plan of railroad regulation was a demonstrated failure, and that any plan of future Government control should eliminate a conflict of control between State and Federal authorities.

"The Sherman Anti-Trust law and similar State laws, in their application to transportation, should be repealed," said the report. "Any plan of Government control which increases operating expenses and regulates income should assume responsibility for adequate earnings and sustained credit.

"The alternative of Government ownership does not offer the measure of relief demanded. We find nothing in the experience of other countries in the Government ownership of transportation which warrants the assumption that such an experiment in this country will be successful."

The report was signed, among others, by John R. Hall, L. H. Krouthal, of Speyer & Co.; J. F. Mitchell, and F. H. Sisson, of New York.

The Bankers' Association at its evening session launched a campaign against unscrupulous individuals who profiteer in Liberty bonds.

It was asserted that bondholders were induced to part with their holdings in exchange for other securities which in many cases proved to be worthless.

The decision of the bankers followed a lengthy report on the subject of fraudulent advertising, read by William H. Maxwell of New York, Chairman of the committee dealing with this subject.

"The traffic has run into the hundreds of millions of dollars," the report said, and constitutes not only a menace to the country and to every holder of United States Government bonds, but to every one of you in your banking business."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The stock market yesterday displayed considerably more strength among the industrial stocks than was forecast in final trading last week, although dealings were light. The same humdrum processes were at work as for some days past, the buying and selling being almost entirely in the hands of traders who follow the market as a business. The steel issues, the railroad equipment stocks, and the copper shares stood in the forefront, with net gains running from good size fractions to as much as 2 points.

Dispatches from Washington during the afternoon brought information from the Treasury Department which cast some light on the reasons for restraining loans for what are considered less essential purposes these days. The request of the Secretary of the Treasury of Congress that authorization be made for continued advances by our Government to the Allies even after the war was officially over, showed that the authorities were looking ahead to possible large demands upon American credith in excess of domestic governmental needs. The Secretary's action appeared in the nature of a development supplementary to the Federal Reserve Board's discussion of credit conditions. The board said in its statement of yesterday morning that a direct demand upon American bank resources might shortly come from foreign countries for accommodation to facilitate the movement of goods to those nations. Considered broadly, the signs hardly point toward any material increase on the amount of bank credits available for stock market purposes while the national and international demands are pressing. Call money was steady at 6 per cent.

The removal of restrictions against short selling in cotton marked another step in the process of getting back to a permanent, normal business basis. The ruling was put into effect nearly a month ago as an emergency measure to prevent a possible demoralization of prices while spinners and speculators were seeking to adjust themselves to new conditions brought about by the signing of the armistice. The country's leading steel producers, at a meeting during the day, decided to intrust the discussion of prices with the Government authorities later in the week to the same committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute which has dealt with all the vital developments within the industry since price-fixing came into operation. The result of the committee's cogitations is expected to crystallize tomorrow in a decision at Washington whether quotations are to be allowed to take their own course after Dec. 31 or to be governed arbitrarily in some directions.

Another statement by the Imperial Bank of Germany appeared, showing again a great expansion of outstanding notes between Nov. 23 and Nov. 30. The increase was 1,760,000,000 in the seven days, making the total output for November $487,000,000. The bank at the end of November held $577,000,000 gold, and had some $4,567,000,000 notes in circulation, a ratio of less than 13 per cent. gold to paper, without allowing for a reserve against deposits.

MAY CHANGE SETTLEMENT.

Stock Exchange Committee Is Preparing Adjustments Program.

A plan for changing in some vital respects the current method of settling transactions in securities on the Stock Exchange is expected to be completed and submitted to the members for approval early next year. While details have not been disclosed, it was learned yesterday that in place of daily settlements for all transactions, as at present, it may be decided to follow the British method of fortnightly settlements for certain inactive stocks and bonds, with the long-established system for the more active issues continuing in effect. The program is being prepared by a Stock Exchange committee consisting of S. F. Streit, Chairman; E. V. D. Cox, Bayard Dominick, William A. Greer, and E. H. Simmons.

The Exchange authorities are aiming to lessen the labor and detail of daily settlements in advance of a possible expansion of dealings in stocks to a large total. They are looking ahead to the time when the number of foreign securities on the board may be much larger than now, attracting buying and selling from other countries.

A purpose of the contemplated change in settlement methods is to improve the way of handling stock market loans. The program, it is understood, contains a tentative provision for a central clearing house for the daily assemblage of data each day on the bank credits and committments in securities of all Stock Exchange firms. Through this agency, it is hoped, brokerage loans may be more easily distributed, possibly through a central reservoir of demand funds supplied by the banks.

REJECT MEXICO'S PETROLEUM CODE

RELY UPON UNITED STATES

Modification of Present Law Is Hoped For, Otherwise This Country May Have to Act.

All negotiations between the Association of the Petroleum Producers in Mexico and the Carranza Government, with regard to the property rights of the oil companies, have been broken off, and the association's representative in Mexico, Nelson Rhoades, has been recalled to the United States. This action was announced following a meeting of a committee of the association at the offices of the Mexican Petroleum Company yesterday. After careful consideration had been given to the proposed oil law, which is already before the Mexican Congress, the committee decided that the confiscatory features were patent and that, such being the case, nothing further could be gained by carrying on negotiations.

The petroleum situation is no nearer solution now than when the American and British Governments backed up the protests of the producers some months ago in the contention that Mexico had no right to confiscate the property of the concerns under the clause of the new Constitution which stated that the oil lands were the property of the nation. One authority on the oil situation said after yesterday's meeting that now that the companies have refused to deal further with Carranza, a modification of the present law, to obviate the objectionable features, might be introduced in the Mexican Congress. If there is no modification the oil producers will place reliance in the support of the United States, the position of this Government having been set forth by President Wilson in a note to Carranza in which he said:

"The United States cannot acquiesce in any procedure ostensibly or nominally in the form of taxation or the exercise of eminent domain but really resulting in the confiscation of private property and arbitrary deprivation of vested rights. In the absence of the establishment of any procedure looking to the prevention of spoliation of American citizens, and in the absence of any assurance, were such procedure established, that it would not uphold in defiance of international law and justice the arbitrary confiscations of Mexican authorities, it becomes the function of the Government of the United States most earnestly and respectfully to call the attention of the Mexican Government to the necessity which may arise to impel it to protect the property of its citizens in Mexico divested or injuriously affected by the decree above cited."

The Association of Petroleum Producers in Mexico, which represents thirty-three companies, American, Dutch, and English, issued this statement after the meeting:

"At a meeting of a committee of the Association of the Petroleum Producers in Mexico held today, for the first time the new proposed 'Petroleum Code' of Mexico, now before the Mexican Congress, was presented in full for consideration. Without dissent, it was determined that the 'Petroleum Code' was unsatisfactory from every point of view in that it purports to put into effect the confiscatory features regarding petroleum ownership in Article 27 of the Constitution of 1917 under which the present Mexican Government is operating. The proposed code provides that all petroleum in Mexico is the property of the nation; that the property of the nation is inalienable and not subject to prescription and that this law provides for concessions of limited rights to produce the nation's petroleum, which are in essence revocable licenses.

"The only provisions of the proposed code which in any way recognize petroleum titles and rights acquired honestly and for value under the recognized laws of Mexico are in certain transitory articles which provide only that lands of an undetermined area on which wells have been drilled may be retained by their present owners and operators, who will, however, enjoy only such rights as they would have acquired by taking out concessions or licenses. As to lands honestly acquired by purchase and lease which have not been drilled upon, or which have been drilled upon after May 1, 1917, (the date when the new constitution went into effect,) such lands are open to the filing of mining claims and to the issuance of licenses for their exploitation by the Government to third parties.

"The fact that the transitory articles of the proposed code provide that the present owners and lessees of petroleum lands have a certain preferential right to obtain concessions ahead of the general public is negligible, and the provision is negatory in view of the provisions of the Constitution of Mexico prohibiting any corporation but a Mexican corporation from securing petroleum concessions or licenses. The law would operate to absolutely and permanently confiscate all such property now held by American, British or Dutch companies.

"The law is thoroughly confiscatory and would result in the ending of petroleum titles and rights enjoyed by American corporations and which have served as a basis for the investment of more than $300,000,000. The associated producers have instructed their representatives in Mexico to break off negotiations with the Mexican Government and to return to the United States.

"The production of petroleum in Mexico has been developed entirely by foreign capital and foreign enterprise. Excluding foreign capital and foreign enterprise from the development of petroleum in Mexico, it is believed by many, would result in a marked falling off in the amount of petroleum production.

"Due to objectionable decrees still in existence, the drilling of new wells by foreign companies has since August 12 been strictly prohibited. As a result reports from the Tampico and Tuxpam districts, showa deplorable condition of unemployment of Mexican laborers."

COFFEE EXCHANGE VOTE TIE

Members Divided as to Opening with Ban on Futures in Force.

An informal vote yesterday on the question of whether the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange should open with the Government's restrictions as to trading in futures still in force, resulted in a tie, the ballot being 89 to 89. This placed the matter squarely before the Board of Managers and it was expected that this body would decide the question at its afternoon session. Later in the day it was announced that action had been postponed.

Some time ago the Exchange addressed a communication to the Food Administration at Washington protesting against the restrictions and predicting a coffee famine. The restrictions as to dealings in actual coffee were removed, but it was stipulated that there should be no dealing in futures.

EGGS.—10,245 cases, not including 1,500 cases for export. The arrivals as posted probably include some car lots of storage eggs coming here to be repacked for export under purchase by the British Government. The offerings of fresh gathered eggs in the wholesale market are comparatively light, but the demand is limited and the supply appears to be about equal to urgent needs at unchanged prices. The tone of the market is generally regarded as firm, advices indicating continued light shipments. Storage eggs are wanted beyond the supply available and the market is strong. Nearby white eggs in light supply. Fancy large new laid henneries are generally reported cleaning up fairly well at sustained prices. Peddling sales above the wholesale quotations given, but lots that are mixed with shrunken or small eggs move very slowly at irregular prices. Some further receipts of California whites are selling at unchanged prices, but grades below fancy are neglected and dragging heavily, with values uncertain. The Passing Opportunity

The end of the war has removed a great uncertainty from the minds of investors. A real opportunity now exists to obtain investment bonds of unquestioned standing at prices which will return an unusually high yield over a long period of years. It is the best investment judgment that the possibilities favor a continuance of the advance in prices of conservative bonds.

Unless held for some specific purpose, securities maturing within a year do not allow the investor to take advantage of present possibilities. That is, in general, they do not yield the high return of securities running from three to five years nor do they offer the opportunity for the appreciation in price which may be expected to occur in long-time bonds.

We suggest the desirability of considering the exchange of short-time bonds or notes for longer term investments. To investors who desire to send us a list of their short-time securities, we will submit a comprehensive list of longer term bonds together with terms on which exchanges may be made. Such investments in maturities ranging from about three to fifty years can now be obtained to yield from 4½% to over 7%. These investments are offered with our recommendation.

West Penn Power Company

First Mortgage 6% Gold Bonds, Series "C"

Dated March 1, 1916 Due June 1, 1958

The West Penn Power Company supplies electricity for light and power to some 78 cities and towns located ten to fifty miles from the city of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, the combined population of which is estimated at 440,000.

These bonds, in opinion of counsel, are secured by a first mortgage on all the physical property of the Company, the replacement value of which is largely in excess of the outstanding bonds.

The mortgage provides a graduated Maintenance Fund ranging from 1½% to 2½%, and a Depreciation Reserve Fund of 2% annually of First Mortgage Bonds outstanding, and also stipulates that additional bonds may be issued only under conservative restrictions. The franchise situation is eminently satisfactory.

The proceeds of this issue will be used for the purpose of increasing the Company's generating, transmission and distributing capacity including particularly the cost of the new Springdale plant. The Company's generating capacity upon completion of this plant will be increased 40,000 K. W. or 43 per cent. over that from which the 1918 earnings were derived.

Investor's Questionnaire

At a time when many securities are being offered at abnormally high interest rates, the prudent investor should apply to them the acid tests which always can be depended on to determine the real soundness of any investment.

This questionnaire, which we will send you, contains adequate tests to be applied to all current types of investments with complete answers. Among the score or more of questions set forth and fully answered in the booklet are the following:—

1. How close are the bonds or notes to the property? Are they a first mortgage, a junior lien, or merely unsecured promises to pay?
2. What is the nature of the mortgaged property? Is its value ample for safety during all periods and conditions?
3. Are the bonds or notes steadily paid off in cash, year by year, out of the earnings of the company, or must they be refunded when they mature by contracting new debts?
4. Is the investment likely to be adversely affected either by labor readjustments or possible restrictive legislation?

If the investor applies these tests to securities offered him, he realizes why it is exceedingly difficult to get more than 6% on his funds with real safety—the safety demanded by trustees, executors, institutions and the most prudent class of individual purchasers.

The first mortgage serial bonds, safeguarded under the Straus Plan, meet these fundamental tests. Their thirty-six year record of prompt payment without a loss during war and peace conditions indicates their soundness. They yield full 6%.

COTTON REGAINS LOSSES.

Rescinding of Short Selling Order Overcomes Liverpool Cables.

The cotton market was greeted yesterday with the announcement from the Committee on Cotton Distribution that the restrictions which had been imposed against speculative short selling and the acceptance of selling orders from foreign countries except in case of liquidation of long contracts had been rescinded. The rule of the committee has been in effect since Nov. 13, and was reflected in the trading on that day by a decline in all active options of from 90 to 175 points, or about $5 to $8.50 a bale, below the preceding day's final quotations. Since the enforcement of the regulation the market has pursued a somewhat irregular course, fluctuations being confined to rather narrow limits, with the trading for the most part very quiet. It is now expected that with the lifting of the ban against short selling the market will assume a more normal trend. The interpretation placed by the trade yesterday was that this factor, along with the news of the Census Bureau's report on the total ginning of the staple to Dec. 1 and the increasing probabilities of larger exports, would stabilize the market and the buying of spot and future options.

The business of yesterday was much broader and more active than in recent sessions, although first prices were 30 to 45 points below Saturday's closing. This weakness was attributed to cables from Liverpool, which reflected a very unsteady market there. Houses with Liverpool connections and some Japanese interests were sellers here, but after the first call the market showed strength on the news of the lifting of the ban on short selling, and before noon all active months had regained their previous losses and were selling from 5 to 20 points above Saturday's last quotations. This rally brought December up to 27.95c, January 26.75c, March 25.60c, May 24.68c, and July 23.85c. On some fresh selling by the South, together with local profit taking, the market suffered a temporary setback in prices, but the market closed fairly steady about 15 points under Saturday's final prices.

The report of the Census Bureau issued yesterday indicates a crop for the season of approximately 11,097,837 bales without linters, on the calculation that the same amount of cotton would be ginned during the remainder of the season as in the corresponding period last year. This compares with 11,248,000 bales without linters in 1917, 11,363,000 in 1916, and 11,068,000 in 1915. If this indication is finally borne out this year's crop will make the fourth successive short crop, against the record-breaking crops produced during the previous four years.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Prices on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday closed strong, with net gains from a fraction to more than 2 points. Trading, after the opening hour, was restricted, and after midday price changes, while narrow, had an upward tendency and represented professional operations. Reports from commission houses told of a fair public inquiry.

GOVERNMENT TO SELL WOOL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Wool now held by the War Department will be disposed of at public auction, Brig. Gen. Robert E. Wood, acting Quartermaster General, announced today. The amount to be offered at each sale will be such "as in the opinion of the wool experts the market can easily absorb." A minimum reserve price will be fixed below which no bids will be entertained.

Decision to dispose of the department's big stock accumulated for the war was reported after consultation with experts of the War Industries Board and the War Trade Board. General Wood's statement said the question of whether the embargo on importation of wool to this country would be continued was now having the earliest consideration of the War Trade Board.

To dispose of surplus supplies of various commodities and materials now in excess of the army requirements, General Wood today created a surplus property division, which will have charge of the disposition of all surplus stocks.

"It will be the policy to dispose of such surplus so far as possible to other Governmental agencies," said a statement by General Wood. "A considerable portion of the balance probably will be required for export by relief organizations of the United States, Belgium, Russia, and other countries. Such balance as remains will be distributed in open markets in such manner, at such times, and in such quantities as to cause the least disturbance. In most instances offer of surplus property will first be made to manufacturers so they may purchase and re-sell if desired. Any surplus still remaining will be offered, if market and other conditions warrant, for public sale."

Silk Mufflers in Demand.

Until about a month ago very few orders were received by manufacturers of silk mufflers, and the outlook for business was not very promising. Since then, however, business has taken a decided turn for the better. Out of town buyers who were holding off have since been in the market and placed large orders for these goods. At present many of the firms are having much difficulty in making prompt deliveries, owing to the number of orders on hand. Not many of these, however, have come from the local stores, the reason being partly due to the stock left over from last season, which was not sold because of the large number of men who entered the service about the time the sale of such goods usually starts.

To Sell Imported Rabbit Skins.

About 600,000 pounds of New Zealand and Australian rabbit skins, suitable for the hat and fur trade, as well as about 2,000 dressed rabbit skins, will be placed on show at St. Louis on Friday of this week in the warehouse of Funston Bros. & Co. They will be sold at auction on Monday next at the Funston Fur Exchange in that city, the sale beginning at 10 A. M. This will be the first auction sale of its kind ever held in this country, though for many years sales of rabbit skins have been held in England.

Exhibition Rules Announced.

Rules governing the exhibitions to be made at the forthcoming Spring style show of the Retail Millinery Association of America, which is to be held at the Hotel Aston on Feb. 11, 1919, were announced yesterday. They specify that manufacturers producing hats which sell at $8 wholesale and up are eligible, and that each exhibition shall be allowed ten minutes. Each exhibitor must supply eight mannikins suitably dressed to display their hats, and no mannikin will be allowed to make any change of costume during the exhibit. The rules also provide that should there be more applicants for exhibition than the necessarily limited time of display will allow, the Committee on Admissions appointed by the Board of Directors will be entitled to select the maximum number of exhibitions permissible. All applications must be received at the office of the association by 5 P. M. on Dec. 15.

Burlaps Open Quietly.

There was little snap to the demand for burlaps in this market yesterday, due in good part to the lateness of the year and the unwillingness of buyers to enter the inventory season with a lot of goods on hand. Despite the quiet prices on heavy burlaps are well sustained near the Government maximums, but there is still considerable weakness in the lighter cloths. Eight-ounce, forty-inch goods are quoted nominally at 12 cents, but there is little doubt that this price could be shaded by a real buyer. At 12 cents these goods are 2 cents a yard below the Government "top." Not much change in the situation is looked for until after the turn of the year.

"Off the Face" Hats Liked.

The success of the "off the face" shape appears to be assured, according to local millinery authorities. Many of these hats are now making their appearance here, several of which make use of combinations of fabrics with fur. The bodies of the hats are of velvet, panne velvet, or satin, with a wide flare of fur at the front. Sometimes the ends of this flare are pointed to give a military effect. Some very "smart" models in black satin are displayed with this flare made on a stiff buckram frame. A box pleat appears at the front, with side pleats on either side. The frame itself is fashioned in this way.

Canes Are More Popular.

Manufacturers of canes and walking sticks have noticed recently a decided improvement in business. This is partly due to the number of canes sold to soldiers who recently returned from Europe and who while over there became accustomed to carrying canes. Fewer cheap canes are being sold this year, the call being for the higher priced goods.

FUR TRADE CONDITIONS.

Factors Which It Is Claimed Will Tend to Uphold Prices.

No immediate or marked decreases in the price of furs are to be expected as a result of the ending of the war, according to the December report of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, which was issued yesterday. Not only is it apparent, the report says, that the readjustment of values of all commodities will be gradual, but the strong financial situation of the country guarantees the continuance of healthy business conditions in all peace time industries. The report continues, in part:

"In addition to this, there are several factors which will tend to maintain prices on most furs. Stocks carried over here are now smaller than ever before known in the trade. Supplies of furs in such neutral countries as Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and Holland are entirely exhausted. The revival of shipping must inevitably result in an increased foreign demand, both from neutral and belligerent countries. Besides, it must always be remembered that with the present high price of wool and other cloth materials, furs—considering their long-wearing qualities—are still comparatively reasonable in price. With so many articles in strong demand at the present time, all signs point to the maintenance of present prices at our coming Winter sale."

The report further says that beaver, fisher, kolinsky, dark marten—as well as pale marten for blending purposes—muskrat, nutria, Australian opossum, raccoon, squirrel, and "clear" silver fox are in excellent demand. Blue fox, gray fox, the better grades of red fox, white fox, and lynx are in good demand. The report also says that while all grades of mink, American opossum, and otter are selling well, the market seems to be somewhat slower for bear, leopard, civet cat, and cross fox. A restricted sale, due to the prevailing high prices, is reported for wolf. With skunk in universal demand and the past season's catch entirely exhausted, the fresh collection is meeting with a ready sale.

Commercial Leases.

The Schulte Realty Company, through Herbert Hecht & Co., leased from Samuel Gruber for a term of ten years, a 25-foot corner store at Sixth Avenue, southeast corner of Thirty-sixth Street. This location was chosen in view of the rapid development of Thirty-sixth Street as a wholesale millinery centre.

Cross & Brown have leased to Mahey Brothers, Inc., the entire building at 508-510 West Forty-fifth Street, for the Bottlers' Manufacturing Company.

J. Arthur Fischer has leased to Maison Louis the five-story building at 691 Sixth Avenue.

Two large leases were recorded yesterday, one being the sixth to the eleventh floors in the new building at 6 and 8 West Fifty-seventh Street, from its completion to Jan. 31, 1928, from the Dreicer Realty Company to the Hylan Brothers Company of Chicago, at $35,000 a year, and the other the building at 439 Seventh Avenue, southwest corner of Thirty-fourth Street, from Frank L. Sparks to the United Cigar Stores Company of America, at $10,000 a year from May 1, 1922.

Realty Notes.

In the Vesey Street salesroom today Joseph P. Day will offer at court partition sale the Sulzberger realty holdings, consisting of about forty apartments and tenements on the east and west sides and valued at over $1,000,000.

T. Butler Duyckinck has been appointed receiver of the rents of the twelve-story apartment house at 38 West Fifty-ninth Street, on lot 25 by 100.5, pending a suit brought by William L. Condit and Henry Van Buskirk, as executors of the estate of Mabel R. Sherman, to foreclose a mortgage of $190,000.

The factory brokerage firm of Baker & Grover has been dissolved, due to the death of Raymond P. Grover. Walter Baker, the surviving partner, has incorporated under the name of Walter Baker Company, and will continue business at 756 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

There was no auction offering of real estate in either the Manhattan or Bronx salesrooms yesterday.

The reported sale of the two five-story houses at 1,879 to 1,883 Crotona Avenue, at 176th Street, is denied by the owner, Morris Fine.

SMITH AIMS TO CUT STATE'S EXPENSES

Senate Leader Foley Declares Budget for Year Probably Will Not Exceed $75,000,000.

OPPOSES HEAVY TAXATION

Governor-Elect Said to Favor Elimination of Needless Jobs to Make Up Excise Losses.

Economy and retrenchment is to be the keynote of the Smith administration at Albany during the next two years, according to Democratic legislators in the city, who are anxious to see Governor-elect Alfred E. Smith succeed. Senator James A. Foley, who will succeed Robert F. Wagner as Democratic leader in the State Senate, declared yesterday that the State budget for next year would probably not exceed $75,00,000 despite the fact that requests for appropriations total $96,858,064.49, as made public by Henry M. Sage, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. Mr. Foley said that while he was not a member of the committee, and therefore was not familiar with all the departmental requests, he was certain that the Joint Budget Committee would do considerable paring. Senator Foley said:

"With the elimination of the war work of the State and by the savings that can be made by the reduced costs of labor and material, the budget should be brought nearer to $70,000,000 than $90,000,000. Further savings will probably be made as a result of the elimination of useless and superfuous positions by Governor-elect Smith. In fact, it would not surprise me to see the budget well under $75,000,000.

Opposes Heavy Taxes.

"It must be remembered, of course, that we will have $12,000,000 less this year than last year because of the lopping off of the excise taxes and for other reasons. That money will have to be made up either by a direct tax or by other methods of taxation."

Governor-elect Smith, it is said, is opposed to any system of revenue raising that includes the imposition of heavy taxes upon the people, and will only agree to this method of making up the deficiency caused by the elimination of the excise tax if it is absolutely necessary. The saving of money by doing away with useless positions appeals much more strongly to the new Governor, and already he is busy going over the payrolls to find out just what positions can be eliminated without injury to the successful conduct of the State's affairs.

Republicans are having their own troubles in the selection of a President pro tem. of the Senate. According to prominent Republicans here, Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara County, who was a candidate for the place, has been eliminated, and the appointment will fall upon Senator J. Henry Walters of Syracuse. Senator Thompson, it was said, will have to be satisfied with the appointment as Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. The element in the Republican organization that is favorable to prohibition is opposed to Senator Walters's appointment, and there may be a fight in the organization when the selection is made.

To Cut Walker's Power.

The Republicans, who have a majority of seven in the Senate, are not disposed to allow Harry C. Walker, the next Lieutenant Governor, to have the naming of the important Senate committees, and will probably adopt a resolution giving to the President pro tem. of the Senate the power to appoint all committees, thus keeping the Republicans absolutely in power in the Senate.

The vacancy on the Kings County Court bench caused by the elevation of Judge Roy to the Supreme Court, which will be filled by Mr. Smith when he becomes Governor, has already developed a split between the factions in the Democratic organization in Brooklyn headed by Democratic Leader John H. McCooey and Mayor Hylan. The Mayor is said to be urging William B. Carswell, Corporation Counsel in charge of the Brooklyn office, for the place, while Mr. McCooey is strongly opposed to Carswell.

OPENING FOR SHIP WORKERS

Newark Bay Yard Offers to Pay Men While Training Them.

The Newark Bay Shipyard at Port Newark, N. J., it was announced yesterday, is offering employment to a large number of men in shipbuilding. It has an established school for training workmen, who receive about 50 cents an hour during training in various branches of shipbuilding, such as bolting-up, drilling and reaming, riveting, chipping, and caulking. One thousand men a month have been graduated from the school, after which they receive pay varying from 50 cents to 80 cents an hour and earn on piecework, it is said, from $7 to $15 a day, depending upon the trade which they follow. No shipyard in the United States, officers of the concern say, offers such an opportunity for earning large wages as is found at the Newark Bay Shipyard, due to the great number of duplicate ships the corporation is building—150 5,500-ton steel cargo vessels.

Employment is offered to men of the army and navy who have received their discharge as well as other unemployed men, and whether they have worked in a shipyard or not, through the methods of training, in four to six weeks' time they can become skilled workmen. Men desirous of finding employment at this shipyard can write or call at the shipyard's employment office, Port Newark.

POSTERS FOR FIFTH AVENUE

Fifth Avenue from Twenty-eighth to Fifty-sixth Street, will be lined with original posters painted on a large scale during the Red Cross Christmas roll call from Dec. 16 to Dec. 23. The posters are being made by a number of America's most famous painters, poster artists, and cartoonists. Each poster will be seven feet by ten, illustrating vividly some part of the work of the Red Cross. They will be set in a general scheme of decorations which includes lining the avenue from the Plaza to Madison Square with Christmas trees.

Many of the posters will be centred in front of the Public Library, where they will be hung on a decorative paneled screen thirty feet high and extending along the entire Fifth Avenue front of the Library. The rest will be placed at regular intervals ten feet above the sidewalls on building up and down the avenue. The huge screen at the Library was a difficult problem in construction, because of the necessity of breaking it by wind pockets in order to insure safety during stormy days. This was accomplished by dividing it into a series of alternating panels and open arches.

For a month artists have been working on their posters at the Penguin, an artists' club in West Fifteenth Street. Thirty of the posters are completed. The posters present the widest possible variety of subjects and styles.

BRITAIN'S SACRIFICE TOLD.

Northcliffe Declares British Censor Kept Us in Ignorance.

The National Britain's Day Committee, of which Alton B. Parker is Chairman, received yesterday several messages of felicitation that came too late to be read at the great Hippodrome meeting on Sunday afternoon. Three dispatches came from London yesterday. They were from Lord Northcliffe, Dr. John H. Jowett, and Admiral Sims. Lord Northcliffe cabled:

Alas, owing to our cast-iron censorship, our American friends know little of our part in war; 40,000 land and sea officers and 900,000 men dead.

Admiral Sims in his cablegram said:

War has taught us the paramount value of co-operation. If we neglect to apply in time of peace what war has shown to be necessary, we will be unworthy of the splendid sacrifices so many of our men have made to win this great victory.

Dr. Jowett's message read:

America and Great Britain are now vitally one by reason of the common struggle, sacrifice, sorrow, and triumph. Let us dedicate our union and victory to the enduring cause of righteousness and freedom of our two nations; marching in unbroken fellowship, their counsels can be the light of the world and their work result in universal emancipation.

Federal Grand Jury Excused.

Federal Judge Knox yesterday excused from further service the October Grand Jury, which recently brought in the indictments against Wessells and Fricke, charged with treason. William J. Sloane, a carpenter and builder, one of the Grand Jurors, was fined $25 by the court for failing to attend. The complaint against him was made by the foreman, Albert J. Weber, who had previously complained of two other derelict jurors, who received the same punishment.

Crowded Out

ADVERTISEMENTS are frequently excluded from The New York Times to make room for news, much of it by cable. The New York Times daily prints a greater volume of cable news than any other newspaper in the world.

8 columns of advertisements are omitted today and 112 columns published.

This condition forces upon The Times careful discrimination in the assignment of advertising space.

The Revillon Zavode at Bokhara

THIS picture shows the Revillon zavode at Bokhara, capital of the ancient khanate of the same name. The steppes of Bokhara are the only place in the world where Persian Lamb and Broadtail can be raised successfully.

Revillon Frères established their own factory at Bokhara for curing and shipping skins, as the native breeders sell their peltry in the green state, and native methods of handling were decidedly unsatisfactory. Révillon Persian skins are now handled by the most modern and scientific methods.

The zavode also contains living quarters for the white members of the staff, as there is no modern hotel in Bokhara and the ancient caravanserai is decidedly deficient in comfort.

How the perfect pancake formula was worked out

Years ago the Aunt Jemima people realized that when a woman mixes pancakes herself she could never be sure how they would turn out. Some days they might be good—but other days, when she thought she had done everything just the same—the cakes would turn out flat, tough and soggy.

To give every woman a way of making cakes that always come out wonderfully—always light and fluffy and tender—Aunt Jemima Pancake Flour was created.

The treasured recipe of a famous Southern cook was adopted as the basis of the formula. Long study was put in perfecting it. Especially ground and blended flours were used—flours that you could not buy in a store. And finally, since good pancakes need sweet milk, that was added, too (in powdered form).

No wonder Aunt Jemima Pancakes have such an unusually delicious flavor—no wonder 120 million Aunt Jemima breakfasts were served last year!

So quick and easy—and so nourishing

Aunt Jemima Pancakes have just the nutritious, wholesome elements that your family needs—their gluten percentage is unusually high. They have the food value that gives youngsters strong bodies and plump, rosy cheeks.

Have Aunt Jemima Pancakes tomorrow—and some other day have the Buckwheat Cakes (Aunt Jemima Buckwheat Flour comes in the yellow package). Try waffles and muffins made with the Pancake Flour, too, they're delicious. Read on any Aunt Jemima box top how to get the famous Rag Dolls. Aunt Jemima Mills Company, St. Joseph, Missouri.

Richer because of the milk that's in it!

Sweet milk, powdered and mixed in the flour gives Aunt Jemima Pancakes the flavor that has made them America's favorite breakfast. You need add nothing but water to have rich, full-flavored cakes.

Try Loganberry
Jiffy-Jell

The flavor is made from fresh Loganberries. We use many berries to make the flavor for a single Jiffy-Jell dessert.

The flavor comes in liquid form—in a vial. So it gives to Jiffy-Jell a wealth of fresh-fruit taste.

It comes ready-sweetened, and the cost is slight. A single package serves six people.

There are ten flavors, but try Loganberry. Ask your grocer for it now.
